A Second Storm Arrives . . . Residents Socked In

By JEAN F. DOLAN
KINGSTON

Ulster County residents still groggy from Wednesday's major snowfall, braced for continued onslaught of winter's wiles.

A second storm swept across New York State and into the Mid-Hudson Valley early today. Starting as snow which could add up to four inches accumulation, the weather disturbance is expected to change to rain, freezing rain, sleet or any combination thereof by the evening hours.

Anticipating hazardous road conditions later in the day a number of schools which opened today, had early dismissals. On abbreviated schedules were Kingston City Schools Consolidated, Saugerties, Rondout Valley, New Paltz and Onteora Central School Districts. Marlboro Schools were closed all day.

The unpredictability of the storm is proving to be a headache for road crews attempting to plow through Wednesday's snowfall of six inches in Kingston and close to a foot in county areas. Charles J. Cole, superintendent of the Kingston Board of Public Works, said today his crews are ready to start snow loading in the business area tonight but all plans hinge on the outcome of the current storm.

"Extreme caution" remained the key word for motorists. Cole said that in the city streets have been cleared and plowed but that it was "impossible" to completely clear many of the secondary streets. The old bugaboo of parked cars again hampered city street clean up and Cole urged residents to cooperate in getting vehicles off the streets to facilitate snow removal from both storms.

Right now it is a "wait and see" schedule in the city and the county as the current storm decides which way to go. Sanders are on ready in the county and the city. The freezing rain is anticipated at the peak evening commuter hours.

Official snow reading in Kingston for Wednesday was 6.5 inches. Overnight low was 11 degrees at 1:05 a.m. today. Other sections of the county reported up to 11 inches of snow with Belleayre Ski Center gathering in a precious nine inches on the mountaintop. Although ski conditions were excellent today on a 40-inch base of manmade snow plus the winter bonus, Nelson Sears, official of the state-operated facility, was watching the mixed precipitation forecast with a weather-wary eye.

Thus far Central Hudson has not been hampered by storm problems. Joseph Benjamin of the utility's Kingston office said today that no storm incurred outages were reported. Freezing rain again may change the picture on the energy scene later in the day.

Friday's forecast calls for plain rain with temperatures in the mid-30's. Saturday's outlook is for clear and cold.

Until that blue sky prediction comes true, however, dangerous travel conditions will prevail over a wide area and snarls of temper and traffic are anticipated.

Mother, Two Children Perish in Milton Fire

By HUGH REYNOLDS
And JEFF GREENE
MILTON

A man who moved his family from the "murders, violence and fires" of New York City to rural Ulster County was himself the victim of a tragic fire that claimed the lives of his wife and two children early this morning.

The father, James DiMetro, 30, is listed in "guarded" condition at St. Francis Hospital in Poughkeepsie, suffering from second degree burns of both hands, forearms, shoulder and back.

DiMetro, a native of Highland, had moved from New York City on Jan. 1, 1973 with his family which included his wife, Patricia and their two children, James 7, and Carla 4½.

Ironically, the Milton tragedy comes only two weeks after the Dec. 26 fire in Tivoli which claimed the lives of Yvonne Crisci and her two children. Joseph Crisci the father, had moved his family from New York City for much the same reasons as DiMetro.

The DiMetros lived in a converted farmhouse at 450 Orchard Street, one of three tenants in the two-story building.

According to eyewitness reports, Anthony Potenza, a tenant in the adjoining apartment, noticed smoke coming from his pantry which joins the DeMetro apartment at about 1 a. m. Potenza opened the pantry door but was almost overcome with thick smoke.

He ran outside to find DiMetro sitting on the porch roof in an apparent state of shock.

Potenza then went next door to the house of Mrs. Iris Davis, his sister-in-law, for help. Potenza and one of the Davis sons returned with a ladder and tried to get DiMetro to come down. In the meantime, several neighbors had called the fire department.

The whole right side of the building where the DeMetro's lived by then was a raging inferno. The flames apparently caused a shift in the roof and DiMetro fell off. DiMetro, Potenza and the Davis youth then "tried desperately" to get into the house but were driven back by the intense heat.

Chief Philip Martin arrived with the Milton Fire Department at 1:15 a.m. "It was very rough," Chief Martin said. "The flames were shooting through the windows. It was like an inferno. We couldn't do anything to save the people. It was just too hot."

The firemen found DiMetro "standing there in his night clothes. It was very cold," the chief said. "We put him in one of the firemen's cars to warm him up. He was in a state of shock. We couldn't get any word out of him at all."

Milton firemen were joined by volunteers from Clintondale and Highland. In all, 80 men and seven pieces of equipment fought the fire which was declared extinguished at around 6:30 a.m. The fire later rekindled itself and firemen were called back shortly before noon. It left only a chimney and a concrete staircase of a building that had once been a comfortable home for three tenants. (The third tenant, an unidentified single woman, was not at home at the time of the fire).

The last body, burned beyond recognition, was recovered shortly after 8 a.m.

DiMetro had "come home" in a real sense in that many of his relatives lived in the Orchard Street area near him. His aunt, Mathilda Franciamore, lived across the street. His cousin, Mrs. Marge Franciamore, lived just down the street.

DiMetro works for Schatz Federal Bearing in Poughkeepsie. Ulster County Coroner Arthur Chipp investigated the tragedy. Cause of the fire has not been officially determined. State Police under the command of Lt. Edward Minahan, who were on the scene, are continuing their investigation.

Governor Visits Benedictine To See Two Injured Sisters

By LYNN MULVANEY
KINGSTON

"God writes faith with crooked lines," Gov. Malcolm Wilson remarked Wednesday night at Benedictine Hospital at the conclusion of his visit with his two injured sisters who were involved in an incredible series of Thruway accidents which resulted in their car sliding under the rear of a van.

Visibly grateful that although the two were injured, they did escape with their lives, Gov. Wilson called it "providence."

That faith played a part in the drama, was brought to light earlier when one of the sisters, Mrs. Irene Baker of Yonkers, who sustained a concussion, volunteered that she had "missed Mass" Wednesday morning because she and her sister, Mary Jane Couzens and Mrs. Couzens' 19-year-old son, Douglas wanted to be in Albany to witness their brother's State of the State message.

"Because I missed Mass," she said, "I decided to say my prayers while we were driving. I had just finished," she explained, "when the accident happened."

The mother of eight children had been sitting in the rear of the car being driven by young Couzens who was not injured.

Counting her blessings, Mrs. Baker said, "I don't know what people without faith do."

Mrs. Couzens, who sustained a fractured back and ribs and who will probably remain at Benedictine for several weeks, spoke briefly with Governor and Mrs. Wilson and was told that Terence Cardinal Cooke, a family friend, had called the hospital earlier in the day when he learned of the two women's hospitalization.

The governor's office was first notified of the accident by The Daily Freeman.

The Wilsons moved back and forth between the women's two private adjoining rooms talking quietly with each one.

Later in the hallway, the governor lauded Sister Mary Charles and the hospital staff saying his sisters didn't have enough words to express their appreciation for the care and the love they were receiving.

Still later, Gov. Wilson expressed his appreciation too with a kiss and a huge hug for Sister Mary Charles.

It was reported that the message of the governor's sisters' accident was received in Albany while he was delivering his State of the State message, but aides waited until the speech was completed to tell him the news.

Special

After assurances were given the governor as to the condition of his sisters, arrangements were then made for his trip to Benedictine Hospital.

Wilson arrived about 3:30 p.m., stayed about an hour and then reportedly left for Westchester County and home. It is expected that he will revisit his sisters at Benedictine as long as it is necessary for them to be hospitalized.

State Trooper H. H. Ganss, who spent several hours at the hospital seeing to the needs of the Couzens youth, reflected on the scene of the accident in which Mrs. Couzens, not realizing the extent of her injuries, was obvious distraught and concerned with the welfare of her son. It was not until the ambulance arrived and Mrs. Couzens was placed on a stretcher, that anyone realized to what extent she was hurt, he said.

Concern for her children and her family was also evidenced by Mrs. Baker who was worried that her son, stationed in Germany, would hear of the accident through the news media, before she could get in touch with him.

"It's important to be able to assure your family verbally that you are alright," she said, saying the first thing she did when she reached the hospital was to call her husband personally and talk to him herself. "It's much more believable when they hear you, not someone else say it," she said.

In spite of the injuries, there was great disappointment expressed by the governor's two sisters at having missed the State of the State message.

Thruway Accident . . . 'Like a Used Car Lot'

By MATT SPIRENG
NEW PALTZ

"It looked like a used car lot for a while," one veteran trooper said following a massive series of chain reaction collisions involving 13 vehicles on the Thruway north of New Paltz Wednesday morning during the blinding snowstorm.

Eight people were injured as trucks, cars and a bus slammed into each other one after another on the snow-covered superhighway. Two of those hospitalized were the sisters of Governor Malcolm Wilson who were on their way to Albany to hear the state's chief executive deliver his State of the State message.

Also, numerous other property damage accidents were reported during Wednesday's storm. The mishaps continued to occur today as more snow fell. Two persons were reported injured following separate mishaps shortly before 8 a.m. today in the Town of New Paltz.

The policeman's nightmare on the Thruway about three miles north of New Paltz began shortly after 10 a.m. Wednesday when two trucks collided in the northbound lane. Troopers said the drivers of the trucks, John Antonelli, 24, of Newburgh and Paul MacFarlane, 35, of Chelsea, Mass., both told authorities that they were blinded by snow blown up when a third truck passed them. Both trucks went out of control and collided, with one of them jackknifing.

Within seconds a car driven by William Slater, 20, of the Bronx came down the long hill toward the trucks which were sprawled partially on the roadway and, unable to stop on the slick road surface, sideswiped one of the trucks.

As Slater and a passenger in his car, Richard Ringel, 21, of Jamaica, L. I., were walking along the road surface toward the trucks after the collision, a third truck approached the scene.

The truck, operated by Albert Bartsch, 44, of Milton, Vt., was unable to stop in time to avoid striking Ringel, troopers said, and the young man was knocked to the ground and reportedly dragged for several hundred feet by the truck. Ringel somehow survived and was listed in satisfactory condition today at Kingston Hospital after being transported there following the mishap by Doctor's Ambulance.

Troopers said the next collision at the already snarled scene involved a bus carrying 28 passengers driven by Louis Dickinson, 41, of Hackettstown, N. J. and a truck driven by William Russell of 14 Maverick Road, Woodstock.

The bus driver and four passengers, Michael Kramer, 28, Allan Wolper, 35, Henry Marquit, 50, and Katarina Krcelic, 28, all of New York City, were injured. Taken to Kingston Hospital by Doctor's Ambulance, which had arrived on the scene to pick up Ringel, all five were treated and later released from the hospital.

Troopers said the entire northbound lane of the Thruway was blocked to traffic following the bus, truck collision.

As traffic began piling up, more collisons followed on the long snow-covered downgrade. Two more trucks collided next, troopers said, but no injuries were reported.

Then a truck driven by Marshall Demary of Pittsfield, Mass. was in collision with a car driven by Gov. Wilson's nephew, Douglas Couzens, 19, of Yonkers. Two other vehicles also plowed into the Couzens car and the truck.

Gov. Wilson's sisters, Mrs. Mary Jane Couzens, 53, and Mrs. Irene Baker, 56, both of Yonkers, were injured in the crash. Taken from the scene by Fatum's Ambulance, both women were listed in satisfactory condition today at Benedictine Hospital.

More crashes followed, troopers said, but no other injuries were reported. In all, seven trucks, five cars and the bus were involved in the series of accidents. The northbound lane was blocked for about an hour.

Planning Board Appointments Causing Esopus Problems

By CARL GRAHAM
PORT EWEN

The Esopus Town Board held its organizational meeting Jan. 2, but the town government is still far from completely organized.

The failure of the board to reappoint Mrs. Helen Ouderkirk to another term on the planning board brought considerable opposition and two letters of resignation from planning board members that were read but not accepted at Wednesday night's regular meeting.

Doris Kelly, planning board chairman, said in her letter that although there had been differences of opinion on the board, they represented individual interpretations of what would be most beneficial to the people of the town.

"The specific action of the new town board at its organizational meeting does not in my opinion fit into that framework," she said. "The reason for refusing reappointment to one of the most concerned and active members of the planning board is at least questionable."

The other letter of resignation came from Louise Campbell, the planning board secretary, also in protest over the board's passing over Mrs. Ouderkirk, who was appointed four years ago to fill a vacancy.

Councilman John Bowman, saying he did not want the actions of one new councilman to wreck the planning board, proposed that the board table the two resignations until the councilmen can get together with the planning board to discuss the situation. Supervisor George Freer set a meeting of the two groups for Friday night in the town hall.

William D. Livingston, chairman of the Zoning Board of Appeals, resigned his post, saying that the amount of traveling required in his business kept him away from too many meetings. His resignation was accepted but the board did not fill the vacancy.

Another letter, this one from Richard Terpening, president of the Town of Esopus Businessmen's Association, touched off a heated discussion. Terperning called for appointment of a police commission to govern the town's constable force. Freer appointed himself commissioner last year, a move that has brought forth considerable opposition.

In his letter, Terpening, said the board would "eliminate all political conflict that has taken place over past years, insure that no one individual has control over the safety and well-being of town residents, would give board members additional time for other town problems, and assure rapport between youths and the police.

Another letter, this one from Frank Picklo, a member of the Association, disputed Terpening's claims Noting that Terpening had aired his letter over a local radio station before sending it to the board, Picklo asked if an Association meeting had been held to discuss the letter, if all members were notified of the meeting, and questioned Terpening's assumption that politics influences the police.

The board voted to hold a closed meeting Friday night to discuss the matter. Freer asked that the town's two justices, Andrew Aurigemma and Robert Jordan, be included. Bowman said that in most towns the supervisor has been the police commissioner but that he does not have sole control over police, with the entie board acting as the ultimate police commission.

Jay Bertha criticized the town constabulary and new Councilman George Villielm agreed with him that people were not getting proper police protection. "We will iron that out at the special meeting (Jan. 11)," he said.

Mrs. Evelyn Gilman, chairman of the Environmental Commission, said that her work with the Ulster County Environmental Management Committee made it impossible to continue as chairman of the town group. She resigned as chairman but said she would continue to serve as a member.

In other action the board:

- Named Bruce Palen and John Moore to fill vacancies on the Ross Park Recreation Commission and named Palen, Ronald Secreto, Lynda Smythe and Thomas Wolf to fill vacancies on the town Recreation Commission.
- Heard Freer name Bowman, Villielm, and Frank Bell to the board's Highway and Bridge Committee, Bell, Villielm, and Bowman to the Ordinance and Purchase Committee, and Thomas Johnson, Villielm, and Bell to the Sanitary Landfill Committee.
- Drew applause from the audience when it passed a resolution opposing location of a nuclear energy power plant in the towns of Lloyd and Esopus.
- Learned that the Hudson Valley Shopping Association had obtained a court order for a refund of $12,333.91 in taxes for overassessment of its property on Route 9W south of Port Ewen.

School District Adjusts Times

By JON POWERS
RHINEBECK

The Rhinebeck Central School District has altered its daily schedule so students — especially those in the elementary grades — won't have to travel to school in the dark.

The problem, of course, first came to light when the new Daylight Saving Time plan was instituted Jan. 6 on a year-round basis. Apparently no one thought of the school children when it was decided to set the clocks ahead one hour. Some were in for quite a shock that first Monday.

After studying the situation, Rhinebeck's Board of Education decided to start classes 15 minutes later than unusal, and hold the students 15 more minutes at the end of the day.

Dr. James Sailer, Rhinebeck's district principal, explained that the change did not result from any complaints filed by concerned parents, and he said the alteration is intended primarily for the protection of the younger students.

"Under the old schedule," said Dr. Sailer, "some of the children at the far reaches of the school district were starting for school at 7:40 in the morning, when, of course, it was still dark out. With the 15 minute delay, our first bus pickup is at 7:55 a.m."

The extra 15 minutes means it will be just a little lighter when the elementary school children leave in the morning. It's a small, but significant, margin of safety. "All you need is one accident," said Dr. Sailer, "it might not be the fault of the darkness, but you know that the thought will be there."

The 15-minute schedule change, however, still leaves many high school students in the dark. According to Dr. Sailer, the first school bus pickup involving a high school student before the alteration was at 6:55 a.m. Now it's 7:10 a.m. But on Wednesday, for instance, the sun rose at 8:20 a.m. "Some of our high school students are still waiting in the dark," said Dr. Sailer, "that, unfortunately, is unavoidable." Classes for high school and junior high students now start at 8:13 a.m. the elementary classes start at 9:13 a.m.

The revised schedule, however, is only temporary. Come Feb. 25, with the sun rising progressively earlier, the school district will revert to its original schedule.

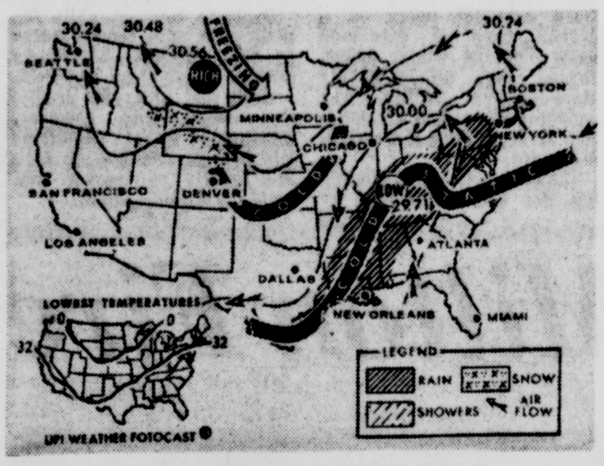

The change really is minimal, but Rhinebeck can't afford anything more drastic. The class schedule for just about every school in Dutchess County is tied to the schedule of the BOCES facility in Salt Point. Unless BOCES revises its entire schedule, the other school districts are virtually locked in to their original starting and finishing times.

That is precisely why the Red Hook Central School District has no plans to change its schedule. "We've given the matter a lot of consideration," said district principal Russell J. Keefe, "but unless there's a change in the BOCES schedule, the rest of the schools in the county are helpless."

Keefe noted that some Red Hook students are now waiting in the dark at their bus stop but, he added, "We haven't had any problems."

Rhinebeck's chief administrator, however, thinks the problem is serious enough to warrant "reexamination on the national level." Said Dr. Sailer, "I think it's a very real problem. When we established our schedules, it was with the idea that the students would not be waiting in the dark. If Daylight Saving Time is going to continue, some very significant adjustments are going to have to be made."

A Memorable 61st For President Nixon

PALM DESERT, Calif. (UPI) — It was some 61st birthday for President Nixon.

He got dog bites in his cake, frosting on his coat, a "Big Mac" hamburger from a millionaire and his first glass of chocolate milk in 13 years.

The White House also signaled the end of "Operation Candor," indicating it believes enough has been done to clear the President's name of Watergate scandal.

Nixon was relaxing today at the 250-acre desert estate of Walter Annenberg, multimillionaire ambassador to Great Britain. He arrived here late Wednesday afternoon in a nine-car motorcade from the Western White House, 125 milese away.

The presidential party drove through Yorba Linda and stopped for about 10 minutes outside the house where Nixon was born on Jan. 9, 1913. Nixon did not leave his car. ..

In Banning, they stopped at a McDonald's hamburger stand where his good friend, Charles G. "Bebe" Rebozo, a wealthy banker, bought "Big Macs" for everyone, including Nixon. The President washed his down with chocolate milk.

Nixon, a constant dieter, told aides it was his first chocolate milk in 13 years and he "really enjoyed the Big Mac."

At a surprise birthday party earlier in his Western White House office overlooking the Pacific, his staff presented him with a huge square cake, decorated with blue, red and yellow frosting.

"Hey King," the President called to his Irish Setter, King Timahoe. "Want a little lick?" The dog ate a corner of the cake, appearing to relish a red icing rose.

In the process, the President brushed his maroon sportcoat against the cake, smearing it with frosting. King Timahoe ignored a presidential order to lick the frosting off the coat.

The remainder of the cake was donated to Beverly Manor, a home for the aged in San Clemente, but the section nibbled by the dog was cut off first.

Nixon was accompanied by his wife, Pat, and daughter, Tricia Cox, on the surprise trip to the Annenberg estate. The Annenbergs are in London.

The estate, at the base of the snow-capped Santa Rosa Mountains, is surrounded by a wire fence, and 25-foot tall desert pines block the grounds from outside view.

It includes an 18-hole golf course and is close to a new medical center named after former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, who frequently relaxed in the area.

The home borders two streets named Bob Hope Drive and Frank Sinatra Drive.

Blank Hughes Checks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An agent for billionaire Howard Hughes says he gave a batch of blank, signed checks to President Nixon's re-election campaign.

Sally Harmony, secretary to former campaign aide and Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy, said in a sworn deposition made public Wednesday that she filled in the amounts on the checks, totaling $50,000.

In her deposition, given last April 27 in a damage suit filed by the Democratic National Committee against the Republicans over the Watergate bugging, she said the Hughes checks were signed by Robert Bennett, a Washington-based public relations man for Hughes.

Bennett, in a statement to UPI, said the blank checks were delivered to Liddy because his own secretary was tied up and didn't have time to fill in the amounts.

"The scenario runs this way," Bennett said. "The decision was made to contribute $50,000 from Howard Hughes to the re-election of Richard Nixon.

"I went over to the Finance Committee for the Re-Election of the President on the 6th of April and told them I was prepared to contribute $50,000 of Mr. Hughes' money as his agent," he said.

Because there is a ceiling of $3,000 on giving to any one entity, Bennett said Liddy gave him a list of committees to make the checks out to.

"I took the list back to my office. My secretary was busy and had something important to get out. I said, 'When you get a free minute, type a committee name on each check,'" Bennett said.

SBA Field Offices Under Probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressional investigators have begun checking more Small Business Administration field offices for possible illegal lending activities as a result of tips from persons who have dealt with the SBA.

Sources on the House Banking Committee said four or five offices have been added to the list of 22 SBA field operations under investigation by the House Small Business Subcommittee.

The offices were added as a result of telephone tips and letters from a variety of sources including SBA employes, SBA borrowers and persons who were either refused loans or granted money under what they felt were questionable circumstances.

Some were crank leads, but investigators say they found most contained valid information.

One phone call led directly to a field visit by staff investigators to an SBA office where alleged illegal activities were taking place. Since public hearings on the SBA began in November, staff investigators have checked five such field offices including the Richmond, Va. operation which triggered the full probe.

Of the five offices, only one has proved to be well run in the view of investigators. They refused to identify specific offices.

A full report on the investigators' findings will be presented to the Small Business Subcommittee after Congress returns from its recess Jan. 21. Staff members hope to have their written presentation ready no later than mid-February, the same timetable under which SBA Administrator Thomas S. Kleppe is working.

More Tests on Bing

BURLINGAME, Calif. (UPI) — Surgeons Wednesday performed a biopsy at drained the left lung of veteran entertainer Bing Crosby who was hospitalized for what appeared to be pneumonia.

The doctors at Peninsula Hospital and Medical Center said results of the biopsy—removal of lung tissue for testing—would not be known until Friday.

A spokesman said fluid was drained from an abscess and this, too, was under examination.

Crosby, 69, was reported to be in satisfactory condition and resting comfortably. He was said to have a low fever and slight cough.

He was admitted to the hospital on New Year's Eve for what was first diagnosed as pleurisy, inflammation of the sac surrounding the lungs.

Dr. Stanley M. Hanfling, his personal physician, said that the pneumonia developed and "for some reason, which is not quite clear, it developed into an abscess."

Previous tests for a tumor, he said, have proved negative.

'Convertible, Permanent' Mall Study in Ellenville

By WADE BURKHART

ELLENVILLE — The Ellenville Urban Renewal Agency voted to seek preliminary designs and cost for both a convertible and a permanent mall on Ellenville's Market Street, at the agency meeting Wednesday night.

The agency, which in Ellenville is the same people as the village board of trustees, passed the measure only after a long discussion, and modification of the original resolution requested by Urban Renewal Director Robert Peck.

Peck's resolution specified that the engineer to do the studies by Agency Engineer Alex Diachishin, that the studies only be done for a convertible mall, and that the studies be undertaken immediately.

In the resolution, as it was finally passed, both the convertible and permanent malls are to be studied, who does the study was left open, and the studies will not be done until Daniel Shuster of Raymond, Parish, and Pine, the agency's planning consultant, meets with the agency and the engineer.

Agency Members Robert Woodhouse and Louis Shore were both opposed to the measure initially. Woodhouse said he was opposed to spending any money on something that might not be built, and shore said he wanted to talk to the planner before anything was done on preliminary design or cost estimates.

Board member Sol Sandler was the measure's most vocal supporter. He said the board needed the data to make an "educated judgment" on what type of a mall was needed. In a recent court decision, State Supreme Court Justice DeForest Pitt ruled that the agency had some discretion in naming the type of mall and when it was built.

In order for Ellenville not to have a mall, a major plan change agreed to by the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development would have to be secured. From the discussion Wednesday night, at least some of the board members feel this still to be a live option.

In the voting, Sandler, Board Member Stanley Kaplan, and Shore all favored the measure. Woodhouse opposed it, and Agency Chairman Robert Dowling abstained, saying he needed more time to study the matter.

After the vote Woodhouse said the board had "just approved the mall," but Sandler denied it. "All we're asking for is an education, a background, nothing else," he said.

In other action, the agency voted to bar a bar from being put back up on a lot on Market Street to be vacated by the Town Tavern. Peck said the proprietor of the Town Tavern, Sol Cohen, asked for the resolution to "further his building plans."

The board voted to authorize the advertising for development of all the agency's parcels in the Market Street Mall area. Peck said there were "three known interested developers, possibly a fourth" for some of the lots. The plans submited to the agency for Market Street development are to be revealed at the board's next meeting Feb. 13.

The Village of Ellenville is liable for a share of the expenses of the Urban Renewal Project, which can be met by "non-cash credits" in the form of civic improvements. The board authorized Peck to hire a consultant for a period of three months, at a salary not to exceed $400 for the period, to identify all the non-cash credits the village can claim.

The man Peck intends to hire is Frank Walpole, who was twice the Ellenville Urban Renewal Director.

Agency Attorney Albert I. Lonstein announced a tentative closing with the First National Bank of Ellenville Jan. 23 for the agency parcels the bank is purchasing at the corner of Main and Canal Streets for a new bank building.

Fire Truck Dilemma in Rhinebeck

RHINEBECK — It was just too good to be true.

The Rhinebeck Village Board has all but abandoned efforts to purchase a used, 100-foot aerial ladder truck for its fire department. . . at about half the price of a new one.

For the past several months, the village board has been negotiating with a New Jersey firm to purchase the truck for $65,000. A new one would cost $125,000.

When the bargain was first discovered, the firm was invited to submit a bid. The village board had planned to award the lowest bid which, it was reasonably confident, would go to the New Jersey company.

When the bids were opened Dec. 21, the out-of-state company failed to meet practically every specification required by the village board. Part of the problem, apparently, is the bidding requirements stipulated by the New York State Department of Audit and Control. In New Jersey, the requirements are vastly different.

But the village board gave the company a second chance. Bids were scheduled to be opened at Tuesday's village board meeting. Instead of a bid, the village recieved a letter from the company stating that it couldn't afford to put down 10 per cent of the purchasing price as a good faith binder.

The village has since found out that the company has been in business for just eight months, and apparently didn't even own the piece of equipment it was trying to sell. The aerial truck is owned, according to Mayor Peter Sipperly, by the Town of Woodbury in New Jersey, which had intended to sell it to the firm in question for some $35,000. But that deal apparently was never finalized, even though the company was willing to sell the truck to Rhinebeck for $65,000.

"We're not saying the company is dishonest," said Mayor Sipperly, "but when we're spending this much money, we want to be sure exactly where we stand and who we're dealing with."

So, said Sipperly, the village is now considering buying the truck directly from the Town of Woodbury . . . for $35,000. The deal, however, will depend largely on the compatibility of New York and New Jersey laws . . . and whether the New Jersey town wants to sell.

With the fire truck issue still unresolved, the village now faces another dilemma: it needs a new police car. It seems that the current model has some electrical problems that are unfeasible to repair. The village is considering purchasing the new car through state bids, which should, according to the Mayor, cost less than if the village purchased a car locally.

And, in one other business matter, the board decided to hold next month's meeting on the 19th, instead of the 12th, to coincide with grievance day.

Meeting Postponed

Rosendale Supervisor Richard Glazer has rescheduled Wednesday night's regular town board meeting for Jan. 16 at 8 p.m. in the town hall. Last night's meeting was called off due to inclement weather. The board regularly meets on the second Wednesday of the month.

New Building Site for Marbletown

MARBLETOWN — The Town of Marbletown has apparently given up on the idea of building a new highway department building next to the town hall on Rt. 209 and will instead survey the possibilities of building at the town shale bank off Peak Road.

Supervisor Kenneth D. Smith reported after Wednesday night's regular town board meeting that a consulting engineer firm hired by the town, had recommended against the town building next to the town hall. Smith was told the project would not be feasible. "For one thing we don't have as much land as we thought we did," Smith told the Freeman today. "Soil conditions would rule against it and there would be no room for expansion in the future."

Smith said that "personally" he accepted the recommendations but that the town board had not acted formally. In the meantime, Smith said the town shale bank at Peak Road would be surveyed with an eye toward building the new garage up there.

In other action at the town board meeting, it was announced that the board would hold a public hearing on a local law that would ban parking on the town roads from Nov. 15 to April 15. The public hearing is set for Feb. 13 at 7 p.m.

Smith also named several persons to town boards, appointing Frank Baggett, Bruce Golden, Fred Lopiano and Mrs. Elsie Weglarz to the Environmental Conservation Commission and Benjamin Van Wagnen as chairman of the Board of Assessors.

The board expressed its appreciation to the Kripplebush-Vly-Atwood Fire Company for its assistance in helping prepare the town skating ring at Tongore Park for winter recreation.

It was also decided that the town would purchase a new voting machine for district six in Vly-Atwood.

Supervisor Smith announced that the town had received a $5,336 federal revenue sharing check. Also on the fiscal front, it was announced that a capital reserve fund of some $60,000 has been established.

Appointments Made in New Paltz

NEW PALTZ — The New Paltz Town Board kicked off the new year in its first regular session Wednesday night with the appointment of committees with jurisdiction over the various town departments. Supervisor Theodore Lasher made the appointments.

Lasher named himself, Councilmen John Gibbons and David Jewett as police commissioners; Lasher, Councilman Dominick Sfregola and Councilwoman Anita D. Taylor were named to the Communications Center Committee; Sfregola and Jewett were named to the Building and Grounds Committee; Lasher and Gibbons were named to the Recreation Committee; Sfregola and Jewett were named to the Highway and Landfill Committee; Lasher and Mrs. Taylor were named to the Public Relations Committee and Sfregola and Mrs. Taylor were named to the auditing Committee.

The town board also announced the receipt of a check for $13,428 in revenue sharing funds and a check for $337.84 from the J. C. Paper Company for recycled paper.

A motion was passed that would allow any town board member or any member to boards appointed by the town board to attend the annual Towns in New York City, Feb. 3-6.

Cypriot Ship Sinks in Bay of Biscay

BREST, France (AP) — A small Cypriot ship sank Wednesday during a storm in the Bay of Biscay and French authorities reported only one crew member was rescued.

A coastal radio station at La Coruna, Spain, said two bodies were found. The rest of the crew, believed to number about 20, was listed as missing.

French officials identified the rescued man as the ship's second in command, Otto Horst Augat.

Officials said the 1,627-ton coastal vessel, the Tevega, sunk off Cape Finisterre at the northwest corner of Spain. The ship sailed from Bremen with a crew made up mostly of Germans.

Peace Comes Harder

The shaky margin with which Premier Golda Meir appears to have retained control of the Israeli Parliament at first glance seems to have weakened her ability to negotiate at the Geneva peace talks.

Hardline rightist elements within Israel, those advocating retention of land seized in the 1967 war, made some gains in the election. This is being interpreted as an indication that the tiny Jewish state, upset by the decisions of its government in the October war, is in no mood to compromise.

But a more optimistic view can be taken too.

It is important to note that the cease-fire demanded by the superpowers, the United States and Russia, and agreed to by the combatants, has continued. It has been shaky. It has been violated. There is great unrest and uneasiness along the Suez. But on the whole the truce has been maintained.

Egypt could have proved troublesome in the interim period from the time the cease-fire was reached until the time the elections were held. The fact that the big Arab state kept the peace is a sign that it really wants peace and that it realistically knew Israel could not make any concrete moves until after its citizens had gone to the polls.

Moreover, even though Premier Meir's Labor party emerged victorious by a very narrow margin, it nevertheless won. Its hold on the Parliament is weaker but staying in control, there will be continuity to the peace discussions.

The aging premier faces a difficult task. Before making compromises with the enemy, she has to make compromises within her own nation.

Israeli hawks can be expected to exact a high price for their cooperation in the political arena. They are upset by the high casualty list and their mood has rubbed off on survivors of the victims of the Yom Kippur war.

But in the end, common sense must prevail. And the best thing that could happen—for Israel and for the world—would be an equitable negotiated settlement at Geneva. It would be to the credit of the Israeli right wing if it participated actively in the peace talks and thus could claim some of the credit for helping restore stability to the Mideast. Then, but only then, should it resume its internecine war with the Labor party.

Philosophical Changes

Orbiting the earth for 48 days, the Skylab crew reported feeling changes in their mental outlook, their philosophies, possibly even their souls. Their views of themselves, of other humans and of the possibility of life existing elsewhere in the universe have all been affected.

In a news conference from space, all three astronauts expressed the results of watching the panorama of the earth, the sun and the stars. Lieut. Col. William R. Pogue said the long space flight has given him a more humanistic view toward other people and toward himself, "a new orientation of almost a spiritual nature." Col. Gerald P. Carr, who thinks people in very technical work tend to move along with their blinders on, said the mission is increasing his awareness of what else, both seen and unseen, is going on. Dr. Edward G. Gibson, the scientist member, said orbiting the earth for days makes you speculate a little more about life existing elsewhere in the universe.

"You realize the universe is quite big and just the number of possible combinations that you can have out there which can create life enters your mind and makes it seem much more likely," added Dr. Gibson.

CHALLENGE TO DETROIT MAYOR—Detroit's black Mayor Coleman Young was given a blunt challenge from another black, U.S. District Judge Damon Keith, who told him: "The crime problem here is essentially a wave sparked by black criminals preying upon black victims." He called on Young to reverse the trend and prove that a black can run the city outstandingly.

TELEPHONING SANTA CLAUS — Con Miller, who runs the Santa Claus House Trading Post in North Pole, Alaska, receives some 5,000 phone calls a year from eager youngsters. Some parents get irritated at their phone bill. One child, Miller said, ran up a bill of $98 while he gave him his long list. It takes a loving parent to stand for that.

Aramco Sought Price Increase

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Locked in the files of Aramco, intended for the eyes only of its top executives, is evidence that the giant U.S. oil combine encouraged Saudi Arabia to increase oil prices.

According to the secret paperwork, Aramco calculated that a price increase would boost its "rate of return." So the company, fearing nationalization of its Saudi oil works "well before 1980" and wishing to squeeze out more profits before the takeover, pressed quietly for higher prices.

The cost of crude has shot up 470 per cent over the past year. This has caused economic shock waves throughout the industrial world and could precipitate a worldwide depression.

The Aramco documents show that the corporate controllers were uneasy over the size of the increase and, belatedly, began to worry about the world reaction.

MEASURE OF BLAME

Likely, too, the Persian Gulf countries would have raised prices without any behind-the-scenes encouragement from Aramco. Still, the company deserves a measure of blame for the Great Price Squeeze.

Aramco, known more formally as the Arabian-American Oil Company, is a consortium of four U.S. corporations — Exxon, Mobil, Standard of California and Texaco. Together, they work the fabulously rich oil fields in Saudi Arabia.

As surely as oil is the lifeblood of the West, the Saudi development is the jugular vein.

We have now been given a peek behind the corporate curtain, which for years has concealed the Saudi oil story. We happen to believe that the truth about the oil crisis is a journalistic challenge every bit as important as Watergate. Not only the press but the government itself has had to depend upon the oil companies for information about the dimensions of the crisis.

LIMITED VIEW

Now, we have developed our own sources inside Aramco who have access to its most secret files. Admittedly, they have been able to give us only a limited view into the backrooms of the great oil consortium. Many of the documents are also highly technical and, therefore, difficult for laymen to understand.

To protect our sources, we have agreed not to quote directly from the documents. We read carefully selected excerpts to an Aramco spokesman, who disputed the contents. "A lot of people within the company write memos," he said. "This doesn't mean everything they write is correct."

Nevertheless, the confidential memos, supported by tables giving the "rate of return" at various price levels, show that the company early last year was quietly agitating for higher prices.

The documents also show that the company later became alarmed over the greed of the oil producers. In fairness, the press for extortionary prices came more from Saudi Arabia's neighbors than from the Saudis.

Aramco sent a delegation, headed by George Piercey, a senior Exxon vice president, to urge Saudi Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani last fall to hold down the price demands. "We were trying," an Aramco spokesman told us, quite accurately, "to keep prices from going crazy."

But Aramco's only concern, judging from the documents, was to prevent political repercussions in the West. Earlier, the company had helped to stimulate a price increase.

The production costs for a 42-gallon barrel of Saudi oil averages only a trifling 12 cents. In contrast, the posted price finally hit $11.65 a barrel on January 1. This is a fictitious price, which the oil nations use to calculate taxes and royalties. The actual price for a barrel of crude, upon arrival in America, is closer to nine dollars.

Aramco's confidential price-and-profit tables are based on complex calculations. But they can be reduced to this simplicity: The company winds up with a percentage of the price rise. Therefore, the higher the prices, the higher are Aramco's profits.

TAX DEBT

One reason for this is that the company can charge off the royalties and taxes it pays to Saudi Arabia, dollar for dollar, against its U.S. taxes. This lovely loophole leaves the four members of the consortium with a U.S. tax debt next to nothing.

In 1972, Exxon, with a 6.5 per cent tax rate, paid the most. Mobil paid only 1.3 per cent; Standard of California, 2.05; and Texaco, 1.7. Other U.S. corporations pay around 50 per cent.

Now, Saudi Arabia has increased Aramco's tax benefits by raising the royalties from about three dollars to seven dollars per barrel.

The confidential tables also indicate that Aramco gets a pay-back from Saudi Arabia for its technical help in developing new industries, such as salt production. The tables aren't clear, but it appears that the proportion of the pay-back increases as the price of oil goes up.

In short, the secret documents reveal that the four Aramco partners are making a profit off the price increase. Only their customers are hurting.

FOOTNOTE: The document's show that Aramco is changing its economic base. Because the Saudis are expected to take over the oil at the well-head, the company is preparing to take its profits from refining and marketing. In the past, it has been the other way around.

Three More Years?

On the Right

Dangers in England

By WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY Jr.

When times get really difficult in England, two things typically happen. One set of people talk about how bad things really are. And another set writes about how prettily the nightingales are singing. Thus it was, or instance, in World War II, when the lights went out, but permitted us to appreciate the distinctive whiteness of the cliffs of Dover. So it is today, when England — no kidding — teeters on the brink of the greatest parliamentary crisis since the general strike of the 20's. And poetic England responds . . .

". . . Nature has provided us with a succession of green dawns," writes the novelist Margaret Drabble from London for the New York Times. "There has been an enormous moon gazing out of a silver sky, surrounded by stars the size of those in a nativity painting. One doesn't notice them so well, perhaps, when the street lighting is more powerful. The lights may have gone out on Oxford Street, but Oxford Street is horrible at the best of times, and elsewhere it is the brightest winter ever."

And Patrick Cosgrave, writing in the Spectator, talks quite seriously about the possibility of a military coup in England. In England! The Mother of Parliaments! The home of the Glorious Revolution of 1688! It is, one would think inconceivable, and Mr. Cosgrave is fidgety at the mere mention of the possibility, even as would be, let us say, a reporter for Osservatore Romano, discussing the prospect of the Pope's resignation in order to marry. But Cosgrave is finally unflinching, and leans where he can on other authority. "That brilliant historian Mr. Alistair Horne," he writes, "has drawn disturbing parallels between the Chilean experience and the likely development of our own. But we can hardly believe it could happen here. Well: could it? The answer is, yes, of course."

Here is what especially qualifies England these days for a collapse of the parliament.

1. The political leaders are not trusted. Mr. Heath went to power promising genuine reforms, most particularly an effective set of laws governing the trades unions, whose antinomianism had become a national scandal not unrelated to Mr. Wilson's looming impotence in the last months of his tenure. The laws were more or less passed. Then the unions, like the students in America during the wild 60's, nudged up against authority to learn whether there was anything there really to stop them. There wasn't. The unions twice brought Heath to his knees. The public, though restive, was not mutinous. It did not demand exemplary action aimed at bringing the unions to heel.

2. The gulf between official rhetoric and public reality grows. For all that everyone in England takes vows to parliamentary supremacy, increasingly Parliament is circumvented. Heath does it with his European policies and his Pay Board; Wilson condones riotous Labor opposition; and the Liberal, Jeremy Thorpe, experiments with reforms which would simply destroy Parliament. What Mr. Cosgrave calls the "spider's web of consensus" is threatening to collapse. If public officials do not follow the Constitution (I transpose an American formulation), why should others do so?

3. Others, in this case, is most specifically the British military. Here is an important point: the British military is at this moment totally professional. There are no conscripts there, to side with "the people" or to defy orders the parliamentary provenance of which is in dispute. Moreover, in times of great national stress, the military tend to be, as Cosgrave puts it, "the final repository of patriotism, though it is usually a simple, sometimes a narrow, and occasionally an embittered patriotism." And this is an army that has experienced its own Algeria — in Northern Ireland, where it got its stomach full not only of terrorist lead, but of poltitical rhetoric. What might trigger it to act?

4. There are even now tanks surrounding Heathrow Airport. There is talk of widespread urban guerilla warfare. There is talk that no general election would be called largely because it wouldn't settle anything. If the Conservatives were voted back in, they would move from impotence to impotence. Labor would only go back in on the shoulders of a revolutionary mandate the British aren't going to give. Therefore?

The international consequences of such an event would probably prove as drastic as the French Revolution. I suppose one should be grateful that at least it would end the bickering between Congress and the President.

Washington Calling

By MARQUIS CHILDS

MEXICO CITY — The shock wave of the overthrow of the elected government of Slavador Allende in Chile is still being felt throughout Latin America. The bloody violence of the military coup far from having run its course may prove to have been only the preliminary to a wider and more desperate struggle.

Seen from here, the possibility of civil war cannot be ruled out. Dissident elements not subdued have gone underground and they are certain to get help from leftist forces outside Chile. Given the hundreds of miles of deeply indented coastline, smuggled arms and even guerrilla bands could not be kept out.

In Mexico, where stability is based on a carefully calculated balance of the forces of left and right, the tragedy of Chile is seen as a classic example of the attempt to impose Markist socialism on a nation with 100 years of constitutional government. Having come to office with only 38 per cent of the vote, Allende made no effort to achieve unity. Instead he forced through socialist decrees with disasterous consequences for the economy.

The one hope today is for the military junta to renounce revenge and follow a generous course. With sufficient time for the wounds to heal, a free election would almost certainly see the rejection by large majorities of the left extremists. Conceivably Eduardo Frei, the Liberal Democratic head of state before the Allende debacle, could be returned to restore harmony and rebuild the economy.

This is the hope — admittedly a frail hope — of those who fear the consequences of a Chilean civil war in an already troubled continent. Mexico took an understanding and a compassionate view of Chile's tragedy. While Communist embassies were barring their doors, the Mexican embassy in Santiago admitted more than 500 Chileans seeking asylum from the organized killing.

Many of the refugees have now been brought here under the protection of the Mexican government, with only about 50 still in the embassy in Santiago. Allende's widow is in Mexico City, but she is expected to make Europe her long-term residence. A Chilean government in exile here has been ruled out.

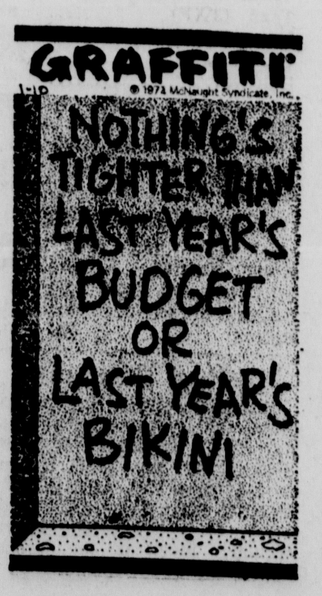

Despite persistent problems such as the thousands of illegals passing back and forth across the border, the United States is fortunate in having as the closest neighbor to the south a stable Mexico. With one or two spectacular exceptions, nothing like the wholesale assassinations and kidnapings plaguing Argentina have occurred here. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's friendship with Mexico's Foreign Minister Emilio Rabasa is one of the pluses in the relationship between the two neighbors.

Ever since expropriation of U.S. oil properties in 1938, a government monopoly has run the industry from production and refining to the gas station. Prices were kept unchanged for 15 years as successive presidents feared the political consequences of upping the cost of a gallon of gas. Two years ago President Luis Echeverria bit the bullet and put the price in line with that north of the border.

A new field in the State of Tabasco in the far south is being opened up. Exploration in Baja California will hopefully yield wells comparable to those in neighboring Southern California. The pinch is on here with a refinery shortage, but it is not as stringent as that in the United States. And as elsewhere around the world the curse of inflation with a rate officially conceded to be 18 per cent annually presses hard.

Echeverria and the able younger men around him stress Mexico's role as a leader of the third world. They heard an echo in the recent interview with the Shah of Iran when he declared that the day was over when the industrialized West could live with a high standard of living on the low cost oil of the Middle East.

Raw materials from Latin America have consistently fallen in price while manufactured products from the north have risen. That day, too, is ending with oil setting the pace. Venezuela having just tripled the per-barrel export price. As Fausto Zapata, the brilliant 30-year-old aide to President Echeverria, put it: "Things will never be the same again."

NEW TOASTMASTER — William Quick (R) is inducted as a Kingston Toastmaster member at ceremonies at the Governor Clinton Hotel. 'Country Lawyer' to Appeal Sentence in Murder Trial

DONALSONVILLE, Ga. (UPI) —George Dungee, was convicted Wednesday of six counts of murder in the slaying of a prominent farm family and sentenced to die in the electric chair Feb. 15.

Dungee's attorney, Phillip Sheffield, a 64-year-old self-styled "country lawyer," said he would appeal the sentence on grounds that Georgia's new death law is unconstitutional because it gave the jury life-or-death discretion. The jurors, 55 minutes after receiving the case, convicted Dungee, 36, of Baltimore, Md., of the six counts of murder and then imposed the death sentence after another hour and 57 minutes of deliberation.

Dungee was the second of three escaped prisoners from Maryland to be sentenced to death for the killings last May 15 of Ned Alday, 62; his brother, Aubrey, 57; Ned's three sons, Jerry, 35, Chester, 32, and Jimmy, 25; and Jerry's wife, Mary, 26.

Carl Isaacs, 19, of Parkville, Md., was convicted last week and the third defendant, Wayne Coleman, 26, Isaacs' half brother, will be tried next Monday.

In his plea Sheffield told the jury, "I cannot agree with the special prosecutor that the way to stop killing is to keep on and on killing. The life of a human being is given by God Almighty and He and He alone has the right to snuff out life...."

Special Prosecutor Peter Zack Geer, who had told the jury that Dungee "has no regard for human life and needs to be removed forever from society," was impressed with Sheffield's plea.

"It was the most powerful and eloquent argument I've ever heard against capital punishment," he said.

One Killed, One Burned In Drilling Rig Tragedy

MANISTEE, Mich. (UPI) — One worker was killed and another seriously burned Wednesday night when a Shell Oil Co. drilling rig caught fire near here, shooting flames high into the air.

The victim, an employe of the Champman Drilling Co., was identified today as John Dailey, 24, of Mancelona, who died after leaping from the top of the burning rig. Severely burned was Steve Case, 18, also of Mancelona, who was taken to West Shore hospital in Manistee. He was described in serious condition.

The site of the spectacular fire, which spewed flames high in the air and was visible for miles around, is about eight miles northeast of Manistee near Onekama.

Although the well site was still burning early today, a spokesman for Shell said there appeared to be no danger of an explosion. He also said it was unlikely the fire would spread beyond the immediate area.

Shell said the fire broke out when the drill bit was being pulled from the 880-foot well shaft. Witnesses said the well "puffed" natural gas several times, then spewed out drilling fluid which ignited under the rig floor.

Cairo Man Rescued in Massachusetts

STURBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A state policeman, braving swirling snow and icy waters, swam to the rescue of a truck driver whose rig skidded off the Massachusetts Turnpike into a nearby river Wednesday.

The tractor-trailer driven by John Fabrizio of Cairo, N.Y., ran 100 feet off the turnpike and landed in about eight feet of water in the Quabog River, state police said.

Trooper Frederick C. MacDonald spotted the disabled truck and swam through the water to reach Fabrizio, who was calling for help as the cab of the truck began to fill with water.

MacDonald stayed with Fabrizio about 45 minutes until additional help arrived, police said.

Fire fighters and police from Palmer removed the pair from the truck by rowboat, and a state police helicopter flew them to a hospital in Palmer.

Fabrizio was admitted for treatment of back injuries, and MacDonald was treated for exposure and released, hospital officials said.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of Dale W. Auchmoody who passed away two years ago January 10th.
On this day you are remembered
In a very special way,
You have never been forgotten
Not even for a day.
God saw you getting tired,
And cure was not to be.
So he put His arms around you
And whispered, "Come with Me."

Loving sisters,

All Aboard Die In Plane Crash

BOGOTA (UPI) — Authorities said today initial reports indicated everyone aboard died when a domestic airliner carrying at least 28 persons burst into flames and slammed into the side of a mountain in southern Colombia.

Witnesses said the Satena airplane, reportedly carrying several employes of a U.S. oil company, crashed Wednesday afternoon into a peak of the towering Andes mountain range.

The witnesses said the Avro prop-jet crashed a few minutes after taking off from the southern Colombian city of Florencia on an hour and a half flight to the capital, Bogota.

State police in the nearby city of Neiva said initial reports showed no sign of survivors amid the wreckage scattered upon the rocky side of the Andes' Gabinete peak a few miles from Florencia.

Rescue patrols set out Wednesday night for the crash site. Colombian air force planes flew over the region to search for possible survivors.

The control tower at Colombia's Calena air base said there were 25 passengers and three crew members aboard the plane. Police, however, said the 40-seat plane was filled.

An official at Bogota's El Dorado airport said several employes of the U.S.-owned Texas Petroleum Co. were aboard the plane. The firm has been looking for oil along Colombia's jungle frontier with Ecuador.

The airport official said it was not known whether the oil workers were Americans or Colombians working for the U.S. firm.

Soldiers at the nearby Neiva army base said they saw the airplane burst into flames, flip over and plunge into the mountain.

Diplomat Must Leave China, Killed Girl

NEW YORK (AP) — A member of the United States diplomatic staff in Peking is being forced to leave China because he killed a Chinese girl in an automobile accident, the American Broadcasting Corp. reported today.

Steve Bell, ABC's correspondent in Hong Kong, said the diplomat is Nicholas Platt, 37, political officer of the U.S. liaison mission in the Chinese capital.

The report said Platt's car hit a young Chinese girl Nov. 25 as he was driving his visiting parents to the Great Wall. The American commandeered a truck to take the girl to a hospital, but she died.

There was no determination that Platt was at fault, the report continued, but the Chinese government informed the U.S. mission that any diplomat involved in a fatality while driving was expected to leave the country.

Bell said he spoke with Platt by telephone, and the diplomat said he was leaving soon. He said his insurance company had paid an indemity to the dead girl's family.

Shark Rips Right Leg

ADELAIDE, Australia (UPI) — A 10-foot white shark ripped off Terrence Manuel's right leg Wednesday as he was diving for abalone off the west coast of South Australia. He died shortly afterward.

Manuel, 26, was diving for the shellfish in 30 feet of water 150 yards offshore when the shark appeared, his companion John Talbot said.

The shark, believed to be a White Pointer, tore Manuel's leg off as Talbot struggled to drag his friend into their boat.

Talbot said he was shelling the catch when Manuel surfaced 150 yards from their 14-foot open dinghy and yelled "shark!"

Program Set

The Robin Hood Players will present a program at St. Peter's School, Rosendale, 1:30 p.m. Jan. 31. They will perform in the play Rob Roy by Sir Walter Scott. The public may attend. There will be an admission charge.

Joe Ubelacker to Be Guest Caller at Lefooters Dance Friday

Lefooters Western Square Dance Club will feature guest caller, Joe Ubelacker, at this Friday's dance. All club level dancers are invited. The dance will take place in the Hurley Reformed Church hall, off Route 209, at 8 p.m.

Joe Ubelacker has been devoting his full time to square dancing. He has called for the "Square Crows" in Cambridge, the "Tic Tockers" in Mechanicsville, the "Twin City Squares" in Johnstown, the "Friendly Promenaders" in Plattsburgh, and the "Catamont Gadabouts" in Bennington, Vt., as well as making guest calling appearances throughout the North Eastern area. He attended the National Convention in Louisville, Ky., and plans to attend the National Convention this year in Texas.

Ubelacker resides in Buskirk, N.Y. with his wife Margaret and their three children. During their college days, the Ubelackers moved to the Boonville area for their first teaching assignment. They became involved in square dancing while he was teaching a class of slightly retarded children in an eighth grade music class. In an attempt to find something enjoyable and related to music, he taught them how to square dance. The culmination of that class was a field trip to a teen dance in Rochester and a camp-out as well.

In June, 1967, they moved to the Island of Guam in the South Pacific, where he called for the "Ocean Waves" Square Dance Club. At the end of their two year assignment, they returned to the U.S. with an adopted daughter, Lendas, from Korea.

Joe Ubelacker called for Lefooters on New Year's Eve and the club is anticipating another enjoyable dance on Friday.

Wife Adds Fuel to Family Feud

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My father died three months ago after a long and difficult illness. I looked after his needs daily, while my brother and his wife looked out the window. After the funeral I let my brother have it, but good, and we haven't spoken since.

My husband, however, never did bear a grudge against my brother. He still plays golf with him, and they are the best of friends. This really hurts me, Abby. Don't you think that out of loyalty to me my husband should not be palling around with my brother?

REMEMBERS DADDY

DEAR REMEMBERS: Not necessarily. I think your husband is showing more maturity than you. I agree, you have good reason to be upset with your brother, but what's to be gained by perpetuating a family feud? It's already causing trouble between you and your husband. Try to forget the past and work toward improving your relationship with your brother. It may take a while, but if you start now, the happy ending will come sooner.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: My parents and I get along great except when it comes to their ideas on how I should dress.

I am not allowed to wear midriffs, halters, or anything that shows my lower back. Also, I can't show my stomach or belly button. (To them, if a girl shows her belly button it's as bad as going naked.)

It's unbelievable how old fashioned they are in some ways, considering how modern they are in other ways.

Oh, I'm a 15-year-old girl. I really love my parents and realize they care about me, but do they have to restrict my clothing like they do?

ST. CLOUD, FLA.

DEAR SAINT: You should thank your lucky stars they do. There are a lot of weirdos running around who don't need anything more than an exposed belly button to set them off.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I suppose I am about the 100,000th girl with the same problem. I've fallen in love with a married man. He's my boss.

He's 20 years older than I am, but we really are crazy about each other. His wife knew about us from the start and sort of accepted it, but he kept putting off leaving her, so I moved out of town and tried to forget him. He called and begged me to come back, promising to divorce his wife, so I came back. Well, he stalled some more.

It's been over a year now. I'm still seeing him, and I'm back where I started from. Recently I called his wife and she was just great. She said she knew how much her husband loved me and would give him a divorce in a minute, but HE didn't want one.

I talked to him and he said his wife was mentally unbalanced and not responsible for what she said, and I shouldn't pay any attention to it.

Who can I believe? And what should I do?

IN A TRAP

DEAR IN: Get out of his life — and out of town, if necessary, and forget him. And if he calls you again, don't have any more dialog with him. He's bad news.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS

...it tells you how

OK. Dragging yourself out of bed an hour before dawn back in mid-December was a bit of a price to pay . . . even for what Harvard Astronomer Fred Whipple has already stated "may well be the comet of the century". But if you miss seeing Kohoutek between now and the end of February, you're just plain lazy: the fiery spectacular will continue to be highly visible from sunset to about two hours afterward every evening until January 15. Sighting conditions will be almost as good each night during the following two weeks and you'll still be able to spot Kohoutek with binoculars an hour or so after dusk throughout February.

This evening is as good a one as any for viewing the comet. It's easy. Just look toward the southwest about an hour after sunset. If you don't see this unusual celestial body's long tail arching up across the sky, there are only two possibilities: [1] your area is overcast or [2] you need help figuring out which way is southwest. Kohoutek is that visible.

About the Folks

Mrs. Belle Dunbar of Minturn St., Port Ewen, will be spending the winter with Mrs. Evelyn Budington of 209 Green Street, Port Ewen.

68 Ways to Keep Warm This Winter

CONQUER THE COLD indoors with some old-fashioned common sense and a bit of imagination. Here, a round-up of warm ideas to help you weather the energy crisis.

Baby, its' cold inside. Or cooler, anyway, what with thermostats being lowered in homes and offices to help conserve energy. Yet, with a little ingenuity, you'll find it possible to weather the lower indoor temperatures: You might start with the chill-chasing suggestions given below. All information was supplied through the courtesy of Sears.

1. Place footstools or pillows under the dining table to boost feet out of drafts, a trick borrowed from English castles. 2. Wear thermal knit underwear, designed for winter sports, under indoor clothing. 3. Use two thin blankets instead of a single heavy one. The layers trap air, providing insulation. 4. Wear a knit slip of cotton and wool. 5. Use wool knee warmers. 6. Use a second set over elbows. 7. Two sweaters retain body warmth better than one, so collect twin sweater sets. 8. Weatherstrip all loose-fitting windows and doors. 9. Wear winter-weight underwear. 10. Hang insulated draperies.

11. A hot water bottle or two helps take the chill off cold sheets. 12. Wrap up in a knit shawl, the bigger the better. 13. Wear long at-home dresses. 14. On sunny days keep curtains and blinds open to catch solar heat. 15. On gloomy days and at night keep curtains closed. 16. Warm feet on an electrically-heated footstool. 17. Exercise first thing in the morning, just enough to rev up circulation. 18. Seal chimneys that are not in use. 19. Keep bathroom door shut at night to retain the heat. It will be a warm spot for dressing the next morning. 20. Wear footed pajamas. 21. Thermal underwear is comfortable for sleeping, too: Choose a print or a color. 22. Put a thin wool blanket under a bed's bottom sheet. 23. Close off rooms not in use. 24. Put up wall hangings and put down rugs. 25. Wear Slippers that are fleece-lined. 26. A bodysuit and pantyhose (color-match them) give complete coverage under separates. 27. If air-conditioners can't be removed, use vinyl covers. 28. Knit something, and keep fingers warm while you're at it. 29. Wear anything quilted, taking a leaf from the Chinese. 30. Pets? Put in a "porthole" so that doors don't have to be opened continuously. 31. Wear cold-weather stockings knit of cotton and nylon. 32. Wear bedsocks to bed. 33. Or crew socks. 34. Give the layered look one last fling. A shirt under a pullover under a shirtjacket, for example. Anything (warm) goes! 35. Wear a granny gown of cotton flannel.

36. Hold a quilting bee. 37. Cotton gloves, old ones, are for sleeping. Smooth on hand lotion first and get a beauty treatment while you keep warm. 38. Wear a fleece jumpsuit. 39. Drink a hot toddy. 40. Drink mulled wine. 41 Wear a union suit. 42. Caulk air leaks around door frames, window frames. 43. Chocolate is the classic fast-energy food. Have some. 44. Wear knee socks. 45. Install storm windows. 46. Chimney dampers should be closed when chimney is not in use. 47. Wear an evening sweater, maybe a glitter one, with your at-home skirt. 48. With the same outfit, wear a full-length slip. 49. It's warmest in the kitchen. Make soup or bake bread to keep you there for a time. 50. Something on your head (how about a turban?) helps hold in body heat. 51. Wear a "fanny" sweater with skirts and pants. 52. Wear a jacket-dress. 53. Wear a cape. 54. Wear a poncho. 55. Under a shirtdress, wear a shirt. 56. Or wear a bodysuit underneath. 57. Winter sport boots have removable slip-on felt liners. Wear the liners around the house. 58. Wear opaque, not sheer, pantyhose. 59. Serve tea in mugs without handles to warm hands. 60. Ceiling should be insulated. 61. Adopt a lap dog. Or a lap cat. 62. Heat bricks in oven for your bed. 63. Or put the bricks under your feet. 64. Slipper-bootees with shaggy pile cuffs keep ankles warm. 65. If you own a humidifier, use it. 66. If you don't, put a container of water on the radiator. The added moisture can make you feel more comfortable with less heat. 67. Eskimos eat blubber for body fuel. If you can safely do so, add a bit of fat to your diet. 68. Relax and think warm. The psyche can help a lot!

HVP Lists Its Spring Concert Series

The Hudson Valley Philharmonic will open its Spring Series, which will take place, as in past seasons, on Saturdays at Mt. St. Mary College in Newburgh (the 3rd concert, however, will take place at Valley Central High School): Sundays at Poughkeepsie High School and Mondays at Kingston Community Theatre, on Feb. 16-18.

The first of four concerts will feature Walter Trampler, "violist second to none" (New York Tribune) who has been sought out virtually by every major international orchestra and music festival, playing a Walton viola concerto. The program will also include Schumann's symphony No. 1 and Debussy's La Mer.

Second in the series is an all French program, Mar. 9, 10 and 11, in which guest artist, soprano, Berenice Bramson who is well known in New York music circles, will sing Berlioz' Les Nuits d'ete. The program will also include Chabrier's Bourre Fantasque, Lalo's Overture to Le Roi D'ys, Faure's Pelleas et Millsande, and Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice.

For its third concert, Mar. 30, 31 and April 1, the Philharmonic will present its second annual Baroque program because of the demand for chamber music and the great success of last year's program. The chamber-size orchestra will perform Bach's Suite No. 3 Handel's Concerto in B flat for harp and orchestra and the Sinfonia in B Minor, "Al Santo Sepolcro," by Vivaldi.

The final concert of the season, Apr. 20-22, will feature guest artist, Huguette van Ackere and Ani Kavafian. Huguette van Ackere, well known in the Hudson Valley area for her chamber appearances, will be featured in Ravel's concerto for Piano and Orchestra; Ani Kavafian, violinist and one of the winners of last year's young Artist Competition, will perform Mozart's Violin Concerto No. 5. The orchestra will also perform the Suite from Stravinsky's "Petrouchka".

Subscription information is available from the Philharmonic office, Poughkeepsie.

Doing the Right Thing

By ELIZABETH POST
© 1974, Emily Post Institute, Inc.

Dear Mrs. Post: My husband passed away January 29th, 1973, and our anniversary was August 27th. No one sent me an anniversary card — not even my daughter. I was very hurt over this. I would like your opinion on the matter.

BROKEN HEARTED

Dear "Broken Hearted" You really shouldn't feel hurt. A wedding anniversary is bound to be a difficult day for a widow, and her friends quite naturally, and properly, hesitate to send her a card wishing her happiness at such a time.

A thoughtful act would be for intimate family or very close friends to send flowers or perhaps to telephone and say they were thinking of her, but they would definitely not send anniversary cards.

What is your most puzzling etiquette problem? To the sender of the most interesting question that I receive each week, I will send a free copy of Emily Post's Etiquette. The question chosen, and its answer, will be published in this column. Send your question to Elizabeth L. Post, in care of this newspaper, and don't forget to include your name and address.

Dear Mrs. Post: When a secretary is asked to take one of her boss's clients to lunch or dinner, who pays the bill? I do not have a company credit card.

Amy

Dear Amy: When a business woman, whether she is a secretary or executive, takes a client to a meal, she pays the bill. Assuming that she is not on an expense account, she may ask her superior for the cash (bringing back a receipted bill); she may take the client to a restaurant where the company has a charge account; or she may use her own credit card and collect from the company when she is billed.

EMOTIONAL DISPLAY — Assembly Speaker Perry B. Duryea displays his emotion during the standing ovation given him when he took the rostrum to open the 1974 session of the New York State Legislature. Duryea is under indictment for an alleged vote law violation.

Generally Favorable Reaction

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI)—Democrats have accused Governor Wilson of sidestepping key issues in his "State of the State" address Wednesday, while Republicans call it an "admirable blueprint" for the future.

Reaction from both labor and management groups was generally favorable.

For many of the rank and file members of the legislature, who have seen such messages delivered by Nelson A. Rockefeller, the speech was "less daring" than the start-of-the-session rhetoric of other years.

Assembly Speaker Perry B. Duryea, the only man considered as a possible challenger to Wilson for the GOP nomination next year, said the message "includes an encouraging promise of action."

Duryea issued a brief statement which questioned Wilson's approach to mass transit problems. Duryea said the governor's solutions seemed aimed at New York City troubles "rather than addressing as well, the equality significant question of improvement through New York State."

The Empire State Chamber of Commerce pledged its support for Wilson's creation of a panel to look into efficiency and economy in state government.

The New York State AFL-CIO also placed its support behind Wilson, saying the governor's message "demonstrates an understanding of the problems facing the average working person."

Senate Majority Leader Warren M. Anderson said the message "constitutes an admirable blueprint for a legislative program geared to the vital needs of the people."

Assemblyman Daniel B. Walsh, D - Franklinville, said, "Well, it was certainly less than daring. It obviously wasn't earth-shattering."

"I thought this was supposed to be a people's message. It's certainly not obvious from this. There's no mention of tax cuts. Instead he talks about doubling the tax credit for industry," Walsh said.

Sen. John J. Marchi, the unsuccessful Republican candidate for New York City mayor, agreed that Wilson's speech did not "spell everything out in detail, but it was more specific than messages from the governor in the past."

"This bears the imprint of Wilson," Marchi said, "the man who has spent 35 years in these chambers. It is him," Marchi said. "Wilson stayed with the problems of the state. Under Rockefeller, well, it ventured into national problems as well," Marchi said.

Democrats, for the most part, concentrated on the areas not mentioned in the governor's message.

Senate Minority Leader Joseph Zaretzki called the speech "muted thunder without substance."

"By failing to address the issues fully, the governor has neglected his responsibility," Zaretzki said.

Sen. A. Frederick Meyerson, a Brooklyn Democrat, claimed Wilson "is trying to remove the conservative image and attempting to be all things to all people."

Sen. John E. Flynn, R-Yonkers, commented that "While it did not spell out in specifics it indicated the routes to be ttaken to meet the objectives outlined in the message."

Panama Canal Accord Reached

WASHINGTON (AP) — A preliminary agreement to return the Panama Canal and Canal Zone to Panama has been reached by negotiators for the two countries, U.S. sources say.

The accord is said to cover such issues as Panamanian sovereignty over the area, defense of the canal and the construction of a new canal large enough to handle super tankers.

U.S. government sources stressed the agreement is not binding on this country but merely a preliminary step to be used as the basis of further negotiations leading to the drafting of a new Panama Canal treaty. Such a treaty would have to be approved by Congress.

The sources said the accord was reached by roving U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker and Panamanian Foreign Minister Juan Antonio Tack. Bunker held talks with Tack in Panama Nov. 28 through Dec. 3, and Jan. 6 through Jan. 8.

The preliminary accord does not set a date by which the United States would relinquish jurisdiction over the canal and sources say this one area could be the most difficult for negotiators to overcome.

One source said that while Panama would like to have the canal within 10 years, the United States would like to relinquish its control gradually, over a period of 40 to 50 years.

And, still to be gauged before the broad set of principles can be used for further negotiations towards a draft treaty is the reaction of Congress and other U.S. agencies with an interest in the canal. These include the Defense, Commerce and Interior departments.

A government source said an adverse reaction by a number of key congressmen could create difficulties for the tentative accord.

In any event, the source said, months of additional negotiations lie ahead before a new draft treaty could be ready for presentation to Congress.

The 53-mile-long Panama Canal has been under U.S. control since 1903 when the two countries signed a treaty giving the United States jurisdiction over the Canal Zone and canal "in perpetuity."

Railroad Engineers Walk Out in London

LONDON (UPI) — Railroad engineers staged mass walkouts in the London area today, stranding hundreds of thousands of commuters and deepening Britain's economic crisis.

Government official predicted that industrial disputes in the nation's coal mines and railroads would boost the number of jobless to 4 million workers soon.

The railroad engineers walked off their jobs en masse after a driver was sent home under the new British Rail "no work, no pay" ruling. A railway spokesman had said he refused to drive a train without a speedometer.

Rail officials urged all commuters to avoid taking the train today and Scotland Yard opened parks throughout the city for the emergency car parking.

The walkouts came as peace moves in the crisis broke down.

"We feel we have reached the end of the line entirely," said Joe Gormley, leader of Britain's 260,000 coal miners. "I do not think we shall be concerned with any more abortive meetings."

Mike McGahey, vice president of the Mineworkers Union, said the miners might soon turn their eight-week slowdown into a complete walkout.

The government said Wednesday a total of 916,000 workers have been laid off as a result of the three-day work week ordered to save dwindling fuel supplies because of the strikes and Arab oil cutbacks.

Rhinebeck Board Hears Nuclear Power Warning

By JON POWERS

RHINEBECK

The proposed location of a nuclear power plant in the Town of Lloyd—and even the contemplated construction of a steam generating plant in the Town of Ulster—could have a significant, if not devastating, impact on the river towns of Northern Dutchess County, the Rhinebeck Town Board was told Wednesday night.

That observation came from James Hawco, a resident of Rhinebeck who appeared genuinely concerned about the much-discussed proposals that could ultimately dot the Hudson Valley countryside with a variety of power generating plants. He asked the town board to consider going on record as opposed to the construction of any power plant—but nuclear in particular—on the shores of the Hudson River.

Hawco specifically cited recent action taken by the towns of Gardiner and New Paltz opposing the suggested nuclear site in the Town of Lloyd, and he mentioned that the Ulster County Legislature has passsed a resolution asking for a moratorium on atomic generating facilities for this area.

"At this time, it looks like the Hudson Valley will have to support a power plant of some kind," said Hawco. "We've been preoccupied here with other matters, such as planned developments (the Palermo housing project in particular), but we can't afford to overlook this latest threat."

Hawco also warned that the current energy crisis could spur construction of a nuclear facility "without adequate planning or protection. It's going to be like the Stewart Jetport," he continued, "once it's here, we're going to be defenseless."

Of particular concern to Hawco is the Hudson River, which serves as Rhinebeck's water supply. "The Town of Esopus (which also pumps from the Hudson) is concerned enough about the effects a nuclear plant will have on water temperatures that they have instituted a study. The river doesn't simply sit there; it's an estuary, it flows back and forth. A nuclear plant as far away as Highland could pose definite dangers to Rhinebeck."

Les Klose, a member of the Dutchess County Board of Representatives and chairman of the Rhinebeck Environmental Conservation Commission, emphasized that his committee is aware of the situation, and keeping close tabs on the site selection procedures.

Klose did note that Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corp. has not yet made any definite decision about the proposed Ferry Brickyard power plant near the Kingston Rhinecliff Bridge in the Town of Ulster. He added that he has learned that Central Hudson has all but abandoned plans to build a plant on Crugers Island, just south of Tivoli in Dutchess County, because of unsatisfactory test borings.

In response to a question from Rhinebeck Supervisor William Allen, Klose said, "We don't have enough evidence yet to warrant any recommendations to the town board, but we are following the matter closely."

Allen, in turn, assured Hawco that the town board "will keep a close watch on the situation." And, Klose added, "We're very interested in what Ulster County is doing. If the people there continue to object strongly, and win their case, that's fine with us." But if what was said at Wednesday's meeting is any indication, the opposition in Ulster will have to battle the utilities alone.

Special Permit Refused

RHINEBECK

The Baptist Home of Brooklyn will have to provide more detailed information on its proposed waste water treatment facilities before it can move ahead with its proposed relocation to a 74-acre tract in the Town of Rhinebeck.

The Rhinebeck Zoning Board of Appeals adamently refused to grant a special use permit to the non-sectarian, non-profit organization Wednesday night. The attorney and consulting engineers for the Baptist Home reluctantly agreed to provide the data to the Zoning Board, even though it maintained that the town body is overstepping its legal prerogatives.

The Baptist Home wants to build a 120-bed nursing care facility on the former Brookmeade estate, just east of the Village of Rhinebeck on Route 308. The land was purchased in 1970, and the plans were initially announced in 1971.

But the major stumbling block at this point appears to be tentative plans to dump treated sewage into the nearby Landsman Kill, a trout fishing stream that winds through the Town of Rhinebeck and contains a community bathing beach not far downstream from the projected point of discharge.

The Baptist Home says it needs the special use permit to justify exact and detailed plans and specifications for the $3.7 million project, including technological data on the specifics of the sewage treatment plant's capabilities. The Zoning Board of Appeals, on the other hand, said it wants more specific information before it grants, or even considers granting, the permit.

Of particular concern to Zoning Board members, and Rhinebeck residents who attended Wednesday's 2½ hour public hearing, is the type of effluent that will be discharged into the creek, and how much of it will be adequately treated.

But officials of the Baptist Home were unable, for instance, to stipulate what kinds of medicines will be discharged, and whether all types of viruses that are treated will be rendered impotent by the time they reach the creek.

Concern was also expressed over a possible malfunction of the treatment plant, and safeguards that would be built into the system. And, Rhinebeck Village Mayor Peter Sipperly said he was particularly concerned about the ability of the Dutchess County Board of Health to adequately monitor and inspect the plant to insure that it was operating satisfactorily.

But James Spratt and Peter Andrews, the two consulting engineers for the project, said that it is possible that sewage need not be discharged into the creek. They said that if soil percolation studies are favorable, a sub-surface secondary treatment process (actually a large septic tank to the rear of the proposed nursing home) could be installed.

Whatever system is called for, however, the two engineers guaranteed that the treatment system would meet all the requirements of state and county environmental and health agencies.

The Zoning Board, however, wants that guarantee in writing, complete with accompanying biological data and at least a rough sketch of the propesd treatment plant. When it receives that information, the Zoning Board will rule on the special use permit.

If the Baptist Home gets that permit, it will embark on detailed design and site plan drawings that will require the approval of the Town Planning Board.

BORED — If Miami Dolphins' defensive tackle Manny Fernandez doesn't look very excited about Super Bowl week it's because he isn't. Fernandez told newsmen during an interview session Wednesday that he finds all the Super Bowl activities "boring." Then he added that Sunday's game against Minnesota "doesn't mean more to me than a regular season game. I can't speak for the other guys. I don't know their attitude for the game. But this attitude is typical of myself." (UPI)

Differences in Approach by Shula, Grant

Quip and Complaint Bowl

HOUSTON (UPI) — This is likely to be remembered as the quip and complaint Super Bowl.

For every quip uttered by Miami Dolphins' coach Don Shula, Bud Grant of the Minnesota Vikings seems to have a complaint—or two.

The differences in approach between the two veterans of past Super Bowl competition have set the tempo for Super Bowl VIII, which will be played Sunday in Rice Stadium.

Shula, who was known in his younger days as a quick-tempered coach, now says, "I've mellowed." Now coaching his fourth team in the Super Bowl, Shula seems to be intent on entertaining the newsmen.

"My idea of a satisfying win is to score the winning touchdown in the final minute on a muddy field in Oakland on the end of the field Al Davis is standing with his watering hose," Shula chuckled when asked about difficult places to play.

It was a reference to how often the Oakland field is wet when the Raiders are playing at home—even if it hasn't rained in Oakland for days.

Grant, meanwhile, continued to make snide remarks about the Vikings' training facilities even though he has been warned he may be fined by Commissioner Pete Rozelle for doing it.

Grant insists he wasn't defying Rozelle. But it will be interesting to see how Rozelle defines it.

"I don't think it's defiance," he said. "I just made my observations on what Miami has and what we have."

He added, "if we had to make our own arrangements, we would take care of these things ourselves and we wouldn't be facing this. The next time we come down, we'll make sure our locker room is up to snuff. This is the Super Bowl and you expect the best."

Grant even seemed to have a harb for the fact that Rozelle wasn't scheduled to arrive here until today. "You'll have to dig into that with the commissioner whenever he surfaces," he said when asked what he thought Rozelle might do about the threatened fine.

Shula brushed off the effect of all the inconveniences of Super Bowl week and said they really had no effect on the game.

Grant said that was "probably so" but then launched into another complaint about the problems of preparing for the game.

"We've got to be here all week. The league says we have to arrive the Sunday before the game. It's a lot of inconvenience and bother and it's irritiating for the players who are away from their families. The less we have that distracts the players and less they have to complain about, the better off we are."

But in one of his rare concessions to the league's operation of the game, he said, "this is the greatest spectacle in sports and the league has the background to base its decisions on. Who am I to knock it?"

Meanwhile, Shula also quipped about the controversy over the fact that the Miami front office isn't bringing the mothers of the bachelor players to the game.

"I would like to think that Bob Griese, who is married, still will be throwing the ball to Marlin Briscoe or Marv Fleming, who are single," he said. "I like mothers," he smiled.

Since the wives will be staying at a different hotel when they arrive, Shula even got in a quip in about their sex lives.

"I used to have a Tuesday night rule before each came but now I've relaxed it and I only have a Saturday night rule," he said.

Then he added, "of course, the coach doesn't need a Saturday night rule. All he ever thinks about is football. That's one of those comments you'd better put 'he chuckled' after."

Dictatorial Ring to Threat

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

HOUSTON (AP) — A cold shiver must have swept through most of us when we learned that Commissioner Pete Rozelle had threatened to fine Coach Bud Grant of the Minnesota Vikings because he complained about having sparrows in the team dressing room.

There was a dictatorial ring to it.

"Nyet" can be a big word behind the Iron Curtain, but it has little place in freedom-loving America, the land of apple pie and football.

In football, there's nothing bigger than Super Bowl VIII. It's the sport's piece de resistance. It's the battle of champions — helmeted, padded gladiators going at it with all the pomp and ceremony, the brutal viciousness and spectacular fanfare of another age.

But there is no reason to hold it sacrosanct.

It's really just a football game with grown men in tight-fitting short pants and silk jerseys butting heads, huffing and puffing and trying to push an odd-shaped piece of inflated pigskin across a chalk line.

There is no reason to deny a man one of his inalienable rights — that of free speech.

It would be different if Bud Grant were an agitator, a bombastic blowhard. He is just the opposite. He is a nice, soft-mannered family man who rarely raises his voice.

His players revere him, his fellow coaches hold him in the highest respect. To newsmen who must deal with him, he is strictly class.

When Grant brought his National Conference champion Vikings to Houston for Sunday's Super Bowl, he was shocked when he found his team assigned to a district high school stadium where there were no lockers or tables. Sparrows flitted around in the shower room.

Grant called the facilities "shabby" and "not fit for a junior high school team." He compared them with the more luxurious quarters of the Miami Dolphins, who were assigned the facilities of the Houston Oilers.

Grant, nor any official of the Dolphins, got to select the training site. It was done by the National Football League.

Photographs of the Vikings' quarters substantiated his protest. They presented a bleak, dismal scene.

When Grant's caustic comments reached print, word came down from Rozelle's New York headquarters that Grant had violated a section of the NFL by-laws.

The section states that a player or official is forbidden to say anything detrimental about the NFL. It is a sweeping law. It imposes a gag on every player, coach and administrator in the circuit.

In Grant's case, it exposed him to league discipline for little more than the expression of an opinion. Grant had a legitimate gripe — even rival Coach Don Shula acknowledged that — but he wasn't permitted to voice it.

This seems to be suppression of the most reprehensible sort.

Rozelle is an excellent commissioner, one of the best. Bright, public relations minded, firm, no pawn of his directors, he has presided over the phenomenal growth of his sport. He has been largely responsible for making pro football — by most polls — the top spectator sport in America.

The game, in season, saturates the networks. The TV companies vie with millions of dollars for the chance to expose it.

It's big time. It operates on a big time scale. At the Super Bowl, the NFL throws a party supposedly for the press but actually for its friends, advertisers and patrons which must cost $100,000.

You'd think anybody who could do this also could get a dressing room for Bud Grant with lockers and without sparrows.

The danger of the NFL with its growth, money and mushrooming success, is that it can grow arrogant and pompous. It can get the idea that it is beyond reproach.

The treatment of Grant in this case hints of such peril.

Arnsparger Nears Deal With Giants

HOUSTON (UPI) — Only a few minor details need to be ironed out before Bill Arnsparger is officially announced as head coach of the New York Giants.

Sources close to the Miami Dolphins said Wednesday that Arnsparger, Don Shula's chief assistant and defensive coordinator, has agreed to take the job vacated by Alex Webster with a week remaining in the regular season.

The only details standing in the way of the announcement concern Arnsparger's exact powers. He has long insisted that he would not work under a general manager and the Giants recently have hired former star defensive end Andy Robustelli to oversee their football program.

"I talked with the Giants last week and I will talk to them again next week," Arnsparger said earlier this week. The Giants, meanwhile, have scheduled a news conference in New York next Wednsday.

Shula also confirmed that two teams had asked permission to speak with Arnsparger last week with the stipulation that no decision be made until after the Super Bowl game Sunday.

"A couple of clubs wanted Bill as their head coach," Shula said. "I can't say which ones or if one of the positions has been filled since that would be giving it away."

(San Diego hired Tommy Prothro as its head coach Tuesday and only the Giants and Houston are presently without head coaches).

BILL ARNSPARGER

"The clubs asked for and received permission to speak with him," Shula continued. "They understood no decision could be made until after the Super Bowl.

"He's an excellent man and I would hate to lose him but it's his decision. I gave my permission because I feel Bill can handle the situation and he is just fine.

A number of Shula's former assistants dot the pro coaching ranks. Charley Winner will take over the New York Jets next season, Chuck Noll at Pittsburgh, Don McCafferty at Detroit and Howard Schnellenberger at Baltimore.

Schnellenberger, in fact, took the Baltimore job last season after Arnsparger, whose $50,000 per year salary makes him probably the highest paid assistant in the league, turned down the job. Arnsparger reportedly refused to work under Baltimore General Manager Joe Thomas.

The Giants refused to confirm Arnsparger's appointment but did say they talked to him last week and will meet with him again next week. Arnsparger is scheduled to be in New York Wednesday, the day of the news conference, and it doesn't take a mathematical genius to put two and two together there.

Arnsparger has been with Shula in the pros since 1964 and last season was named defensive coordinator and his No. 1 assistant. He also coached at Miami of Ohio, Ohio State and Tulane and met Shula when they were both assistants at the University of Kentucky.

The 46-year-old native of Paris, Ky., helped put together the Baltimore defense in the mid-1960s that was acclaimed as the best in the game and after arriving in Miami with Shula in 1970, duplicated the effort there.

The Dolphins ranked first in the league in total defense last season and second this year, thanks mainly to Arnsparger's defensive innovations. He devised the now famous Dolphin 5 3-defense, which utilizes linebacker Bob Matheson as a combination linebacker-defensive end.

Nets Alone in 1st

By United Press International

Led by a starting five which averages only 22 years old, youngest in the pros, the New York Nets are alone atop the American Basketball Association's East Division as the season moves into the second half.

Julius "Dr. J" Erving, only 23-years old himself, is the flashy leader of the Nets. The 6-foot 6 Doctor's incredible skills already have many people calling him the best forward ever to play the game.

Dr. J, leading the league in scoring with a 27.7 average, is also seventh in rebounding, third in blocked shots, second in steals and 11th in assists.

Wednesday night, Dr. J netted 31 points and added 11 rebounds to his seven assists to pace New York to a 108-94 victory over the Memphis Tams and move the Nets a half-game ahead of the idle Carolina Cougars in the East.

The Nets, who lost nine straight while getting used to each other and rookie coach Kevin Loughery early in the season, were in first briefly a few weeks ago before slipping behind Carolina and Kentucky.

"We've been there before and there was some excitement," said Dr. J. "Now the guys are taking it low-keyed. Maybe we have the feeling we belong after all. We've beaten the good teams, teams like Kentucky, who now walk the ball up on us and never really play their game. Then we've proved we can play Carolina tough, even with Billy Cunningham.

"But we're supposed to beat the weak teams, teams like the Tams, and we're doing it. Right now the biggest thing for us is to maintain it."

Using his bench more and urging his players to look for the open man, has been Loughery's chief coaching contribution since the team started its climb. Against the Tams, balance was again the key, despite Dr. J's outstanding statistics.

Rookie forward Larry Kenon had 18 points and 14 rebounds, center Billy Paultz had 14 points and 14 rebounds, rookie guard John Williamson had 22 points and John Roche, starting for injured guard Brian Taylor (back strain) had 14 points and eight assists.

Memphis was led by Randy Denton's 20 points and Larry Finch's 18.

In other ABA games, Western Division leader Utah won its eighth straight, 115-112 over San Diego and Denver whipped Virginia 119-103.

San Diego led at the end of each of the first three quarters, but Willie Wise led a Utah comeback in the fourth period which saw the score tied seven times and the lead change hands 12 times. Wise led all scorers with 35 points. Utah has now won 16 out of its last 19 games and upped its Western Division lead over Indiana to three games.

Six Denver Rockets hit in double figures to offset the 37-point performance by Virginia's George Gervin and lead Denver to victory. Ralph Simpson paced the Rockets with 23 points, 15 of which came in the first half while Denver built a 59-42 lead. Dave Robisch, who had 11 rebounds, and Warren Jabali, who had 10 assists, each had 20 points.

Celts Beat Snow, Bulls

By United Press International

It seems neither rain, nor sleet, nor gloom of night, nor even snow can prevent the Boston Celtics from romping past their appointed opponents.

But Old Man Winter nearly blew the whistle on Wednesday night's game in Boston as the Celtics trampled the Chicago Bulls, 106-89.

A major winter storm blanketed the New England region with as much as 10 inches of snow, snarling traffic and bringing travel in the Northeast nearly to a standstill.

"It was cold out there," said Celtic coach Tommy Heinsohn about the court after the game. "They've been keeping the heat down and with this storm today it was really cold on the court. That's why the first half was so slow."

What slowed down the first half was the inability of either team to handle the ball in the manner of professional basketball. The Bulls and the Celtics committed 23 turnovers in the opening two periods. For Chicago their misplays spelled most of the difference at halftime, as the 10 points they surrendered in their 13 turnovers handed Boston its 48-37 edge midway in the game.

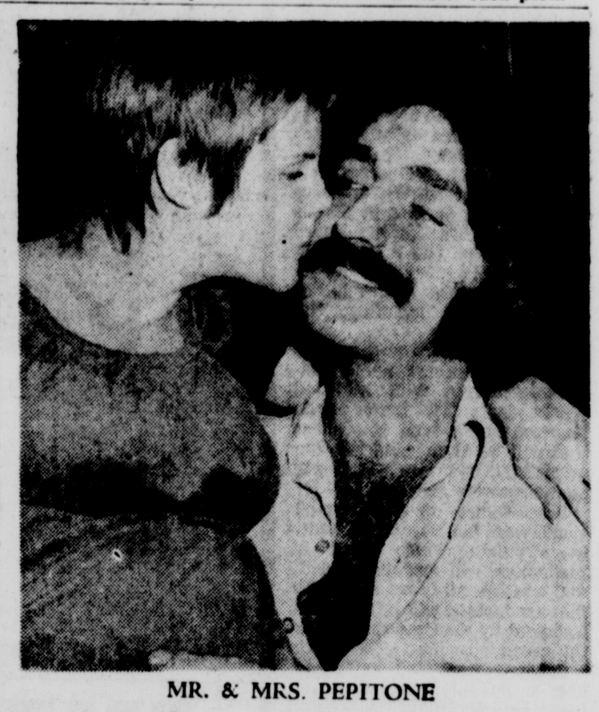

"We played like a bunch of amateurs in the first half," said Chicago coach Dick Motta. "They weren't much better, but they were luckier. What did we pick up, just two points on their mistakes?"

The Bulls made it to Boston after eight hours from Chicago but the three officials assigned by the NBA to referee the game did not. The game started at its scheduled time, but the tapoff was presided over by Kenny Hudson, a former NBA referee, with the assistance of Roscoe Baker, an official at many local college games. Baker's sole experience with pro basketball had been three intrasquad prcatice games held by the Celtics.

Jerry Loeber, the official referee, finally arrived by train from New York and took over the officiating duties in the second period. But Earl Strom and Lee Jones were trapped in New York by the weather and were never heard from.

Ultimately, it was rebounding that gave the game to Boston as Dave Cowens grabbed 19 caroms and Paul Silas caught another 11. As a team, the Celtics pulled in a whopping 65 rebounds while the Bulls could get their hands on only 29.

In other NBA action, Detroit whipped Los Angeles 123-94, Phoenix nipped Houston 105-101, Seattle beat Kansas City-Omaha 100-96 and Philadelphia clipped Cleveland 90-86.

MR. & MRS. PEPITONE

Pepi Tries Marriage Again

CHICAGO (UPI) — Former Chicago Cubs first baseman Joe Pepitone Wednesday announced that he had married his long-time sweetheart and said he and his wife were expecting a baby in March.

Pepitone married 23-year-old Stephanie Shipley Tuesday.

Friends said Pepitone, 33, was with "Stevie" Tuesday on a downtown shopping trip when he turned to her and asked "Why don't we get married today?"

Cook County Circuit Court Judge John A. Ouska performed the brief courtroom ceremony.

"I've sat on the bench for 10 years and the first time my five kids reacted to a case was when I told them I married Pepitone," the judge said. "Suddenly, I'm a hero."

Pepitone said he planned to return to Japan this spring to complete the second year of his Japanese baseball contract.

Rangers Better Watch Out

By United Press International

The fat cat New York Rangers had better start getting serious about making the National Hockey League playoffs this year.

Two goals by defenseman Mike Pelyk propelled the much improved Toronto Maple Leafs ahead of New York into third place in the NHL's Eastern Division Wednesday night and that could be a bad omen for the struggling Rangers—long accused of being overpaid and lacking in desire.

Luckily, however, for New York, fourth place Buffalo was unable to make a similar gain, losing 3-0 to the Atlanta Flames to remain three points back of the Rangers. In other NHL action, the Chicago Black Hawks and Los Angeles Kings fought to a 4-4 tie, the Minnesota North Stars and Detroit Red Wings deadlocked at 2-2 and California beat St. Louis 8-6.

In the World Hockey Association, the Edmonton Oilers eked out a 6-4 victory over the Minnesota Fighting Saints and Winnipeg defeated Vancouver 6-4.

Toronto, which has won five and tied one of its last seven games, also got goals from Brian Glenny, Jim McKenny, Rick Kehoe and Gary Monahan in moving two points ahead of the idle Rangers for third place in the NHL east with 47. The hapless Penguins, meanwhile, have won just once in their last 10 games.

If Toronto was having its fun advancing, the Chicago Black Hawks weren't as lucky. Bob Murdoch's goal with 2:20 left to play lifted Los Angeles into a 4-4 tie with Chicago, preventing the Hawks from gaining a first place tie with the Philadelphia Flyers in the western division. One bright spot for Chicago was Pit Martin who scored his first hat trick in more than three years with what appeared to be the winning goal until Murdoch's tally.

Buffalo, hoping to edge either Toronto or the Rangers out for the final playoff berth in the east, ran into Dan Bouchard, the Atlanta's cool goalie who stopped 32 shots in sparking the Flames to a 3-0 win. Bouchard drew standing ovations from the crowd of 12,522 for his brilliant saves as the Flames raced to their fourth straight win which also put them over the .500 mark (17-16-7). Jacques Richard, Bob Leither and Curt Bennett scored the Atlanta goals.

Ivan Boldirev scored four goals to spur the California Golden Seals past the St. Louis Blues. The California center became only the second player in the league to have a four-goal game this season. Chris Oddleifson of Boston was the first, also on the Oakland Coliseum Arena ice, and his feat occurred on Dec. 30 against the Seals.

Two of Boldirev's goals came within a 33-second span of the second period to lift the Seals into a 5-4 lead. In compiling his first career hat trick, Boldirev also scored in the first and third periods in the loosely played game. Boldirev's fourth score helped the Seals withstand a frantic rally in the final minutes.

Fred Stanfield's goal with nine minutes remaining enabled the North Stars to gain their tie with Detroit after the Wings' Bill Libett and Minnesota's Tom Reid traded goals in the first period and Detroit's Mickey Redmond had rammed home his 22nd marker in the third.

Defenseman Al Hamilton's long screen shot with just over six minutes left to play broke up a 4-4 tie and spurred Edmonton to its 6-4 win over the Minnesota Fighting Saints in the World Hockey Association. Hamilton's shot zoomed through a mass of players past Minnesota goalie Mike Curran and extended the Saints' home loss skein to five straight games since Dec. 21. Edmonton moved to within two points of Houston in the WHA west.

Carter to San Diego

CINCINNATI (AP) — Virgil Carter got his wish: another chance at being No. 1 quarterback.

So now, instead of dueling 24-year-old Ken Anderson of the Cincinnati Bengals, he may be trying to push aging Johnny Unitas a step closer to retirement.

"I'm delighted," said Carter after hearing Wednesday he was being traded by the Bengals to the San Diego Chargers.

Cincinnati acquired 26-year-old quarterback Wayne Clark, who produced one of the Chargers' two victories of 1973.

Ski Touring

Ulster County always seems to be the county that's left out in the cold when the New York State Parks and Recreation Commission doles out the goodies.

Alexander Aldrich, the state commissioner in that area, has just released an attractive brochure dealing with "Ski Touring in New York State Parks" and you won't find one Ulster County state-operated ski touring trail among nine regions in the state. So what's new?

There are 28 ski touring trails in those nine regions, four in Dutchess County. It is relevant at this point to pose a rhetorical question: What has Nelson Rockefeller (and those who preceded him) ever done for Ulster County in the parks and recreation area?

Let's examine the difference betwen Dutchess and Ulster counties in the areas of state-operated park and recreation facilities. It's no contest. Dutchess has four ski touring areas — James Baird, Ogden and Ruth Livingston Mills, the Taconic-Copake Falls Area and Olana.

Ulster county has state park facilities at Minnewaska and the Wilson State Park in the Wittenberg area, but you won't find ski touring trails at either. The Wilson Park has been hanging in a not-quite-finished status for many years.

There are privately owned ski trails at Williams Lake in Rosendale and at Lake Mohonk. Belleayre is a state-operated ski center without facilities for ski touring.

Ski touring is rapidly developing into big business. It is estimated that one out of every four purchasers of skis now buys touring equipment. A statistical survey conducted by Tap Goodneough for Skier, the official publication of the Eastern Amateur Ski Association indicates that touring will be more popular than ever this 1973-74 winter season.

There are many reasons for the boom in the slide-and-glide. First, it doesn't involve using lifts and is much less costly. Next, anyone of any age can enjoy it safely. And it's very much a family sport. If you have never skied before, touring is simple, although a couple of lessons from a certified instructor are suggested.

There is no age limit to touring and persons in their 70s and 80s hit the trails daily. Ski touring is 60 centuries old. Yet for many it's a brand new thrill. And the clan will expand this season.

Skis, boots and bindings will cost you about $60 or $70. Regular ski poles can be used, although it's better to obtain those for touring which have curved tips to prevent them from catching in surfaces.

Ask for touring skis, not cross country models. The touring models are lighter and wider, making them more durable and less wiggly. These skis are ideal for beginners, but many switch to lighter touring models after they become devotees.

Your skis should have surfaces of hickory, with lignostone edges. Cost is extra, but they'll last forever.

When it comes to state-operated and semi-public golf facilities, there is absolutely no comparison between Ulster and Dutchess counties. In Ulster we have no semi-public courses, one public layout (Greene Acres) and no state-operated facilities until the Wilson Park is completed. The other courses are privately or hotel-operated with very limited green-fees players allowed. Rip Van Winkle, on the Ulster-Greene border in Palenville, is a public layout.

Compare these facilities with Dutchess where the state operates public golf courses at James Baird Park in Freedom Plains and the Dinsmore layout at Staatsburg. In addition, Dutchess golfers have access to five other clubs — Beekman at Hopewell Junction, Alexander Caven and James McCann at Poughkeepsie, Dutcher at Pawling and Dogwood Knolls at Fishkill Plains. Beekman, McCann and Dutcher are 18-holers.

Doesn't all this suggest that Ulster County, despite the legislative muscle we have had in Albany down through the years, has been shafted by New York State in the parks and recreation areas down through the years?

Bearcats Too Much For Cards

Were it not for Cincinnati, Louisville would very likely be hob-nobbing with the UCLAs, Notre Dames and Marylands among college basketball's elite.

The ninth-ranked (tie) Cardinals had been making steady progress toward the top five after an opening season loss to Cincinnati until they ran into the Bearcats again Wednesday night. The result? Cincinnati 77 Louisville 70 and maybe it's the Bearcats who should've been rated in the top 10 afterall.

In the only other games involving a top 20 teams Wednesday, fourth-rated North Carolina outshot Clemson 102-90 and 14th-ranked South Carolina downed Lafayette 84-63 and 15th-rated Wisconsin edged Ohio U. 69-68. Elsewhere, Kansas State whipped Northeast Missouri 76-54 and Furman topped St. Peters (N.J.) 120-91.

Substitute Mark Brackman scored eight of Cincinnati's final nine points and the Bearcats held off a late Louisville rally to topple the Cardinals for the second time this year. Louisville had lost only twice in 10 starts this season but the first one was to Cincinnati, 65-58 in the season opener. The Bearcats are now 9-3.

Fifth-ranked North Carolina jumped out to a 12-0 lead against Clemson but had to rely on some timely free throws to walk off with a 102-90 win. The Tar Heels' Walter Davis led all scorers with 27 points including ten free throws while Van Gregg had 24 for the losing Tigers.

South Carolina, riding high after its stunning one-point win over previously unbeaten Marquette last Saturday, extended its home court winning streak to 29 with an easy 84-63 win over outclassed Lafayette. Sophomores Alex English and Brian Dunleavy had 20 points apiece for the Gamecocks (now 8-2) and South Carolina's Brian Winters led all scorers with 24.

Fifteenth-ranked Wisconsin ran its record to 9-1 with a hard-fought one-point triumph over stubborn Ohio U. The Badgers blew an 11-point halftime lead and had to survive on a hook shot by Kim Hughes in the final minutes to pull out the game on their home court.

HAPPY TIME — Roy Smalley (C), switch-hitting All American shortstop from USC, is surrounded by smiling faces after being informed that he is the first pick in the free agent baseball draft. With him after the announcement is Gene Mauch (L) his uncle and manager of the Montreal Expos, his mother Jolene and his father Roy. (UPI)

Landing Roy Smalley Big Trick for Rangers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Texas Rangers didn't take very long to satisfy Roy Smalley, Jr., the No. 1 choice in baseball's free agent draft.

The Rangers picked the young shortstop from the University of Southern California to open the draft and then interrupted the telephonic hookup after the first round to announce his signing.

That was no small accomplishment for the Rangers. Smalley, son of a former major leaguer and nephew of Montreal Manager Gene Mauch, had been selected four times in previous drafts, once by his uncle's club, but always chose to continue his education instead of turning professional.

But Smalley stayed out of school last September to be eligible for the winter draft and the Rangers snapped him up.

"I'm very pleased and excited," said the 21-year-old infielder, adding that if he played baseball as well as his father, "I'll call it a good career."

Smalley, Sr. spent 10 years in the majors as a shortstop for the Chicago Cubs, Milwaukee Braves and Philadelphia Phillies.

"I'm flattered," said the father. "It's an ego trip for me just to be compared to my son."

Another proud father was Harding Peterson, director of scouting for the Pittsburgh Pirates, who selected his son, Eric, a left-handed pitcher at Gulf Coast Community College, in the fourth round of the Class A draft.

"You'll have to explain why he wasn't No. 1," kidded Johnny Johnson of the commissioners staff, who ran the draft.

Two other relatives of familiar major leaguers were drafted in the first round. San Diego picked infielder Thomas Ashford of Covington, Tenn., a brother-in-law of Cincinnati infielder Phil Gagliano, and California chose Larry Howser, a shortstop from West Palm Beach, Fla., and brother of New York Yankee Coach Dick Howser.

In the secondary phase, dealing with players previously drafted but not signed, the top selection belonged to Kansas City which chose right-handed pitcher David Hasbach of Miami University of Ohio.

Later in the secondary phase, San Francisco picked right-handed pitcher Cliff Mays of Portland, Ore. There was some confusion on the spelling of the player's name but Jack Schwarz, the Giants' farm director who was making the Giants' selections, cleared it up in a hurry.

"M-a-y-s," he said, "like Willie."

A total of 257 players were selected in the regular and secondary phases of the draft compared to 251 in last year's winter draft.

Reject Bid For Padres

CHICAGO (AP) — At a costly risk, the National League still is playing the hidden ball trick with the San Diego Padre franchise.

With spring training just around the corner, the NL's ownership rejected Wednesday proposed purchase of the Padres by a nine-member Los Angeles group headed by horse race executive Majorie Everett.

It marked the fourth time in five months the NL bosses failed to do anything about helping finanically strapped owner C. Arnholt Smith unload his five-year-old Padre franchise.

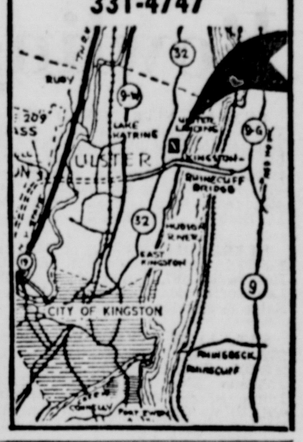

League President Chub Feeney made a hurried and almost furtive short announcement after Wednesday's 3½-hour meeting drew another blank.

"The National League declined approval of the proposed sale of the San Diego franchise to a group represented by attorney Neil Papiano," Feeney announced. That meant thumbs down on the Everett faction.

Feeney wound up his brief statement with: "The league plans to explore and consider other possibilities in the near furture."

It was reported the dissenting vote was 9-3, with only Phil Wrigley of the Chicago Cubs; Horace Stoneham of the San Francisco Giants, and Buzzie Bavasi of the Padres casting for the Everett group.

New Eligibility Woes For Long Beach State

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The NCAA, which put Long Beach State on probation earlier this week, has slapped the school again — this time declaring ineligible two starters on the 49ers' ninth-ranked basketball team.

A university spokesman said Wednesday that forward Roscoe Pondexter, a junior, and senior guard Glenn McDonald were ruled inelgible for allegedly failing to take 1.6 grade predictability tests.

The school said it would appeal the decision and that an attorney was seeking court action today to order reinstatement of the players.

The NCAA has dropped the test requirement, but the tests were necessary when McDonald and Pondexter first went to Long Beach.

Dr. Stephen Horn, president of Long Beach State, said he had signed statements from both players saying they took the exams. But he said he and no one in the athletic department knew if the two took the tests.

Horn termed the projection exams a "farce" saying they were "white middle class oriented" and did not accurately indicate inteligence. Both players involved are black.

Pondexter was the team's second leading scorer, averaging 14.4 points a game. McDonald was averaging 12.2 for the 49ers, 10-1, who play a Pacific Coast Athletic Association game at the University of the Pacific at Stockton, Calif., tonight.

The NCAA put Long Beach State on three years' probation last Sunday for recruiting and other violations involving the school's football and basketball teams.

The PCAA said it will allow Long Beach to be the conference champion — if the 49ers win the title, but the league will be represented by the second place team in postseason play since Long Beach is now banned from NCAA competition.

1973 NEA Third Down Awards

Quarterbacks Prove No Passing Fancy

quarterback, that glamorized super-figure of pro football, made a big comeback in 1973.

You say you never realized he was away?

Well, last season was the Year of the Running Back, and the way zone defenses have been shutting out the pass, it looked like Joe Willie Namath and cohorts were going to be reduced to middle men on hand-offs.

However, the players of the National Football League have restored a sense of importance to the quarterback position. They did this tangibly by voting nine of them the most valuable players on their teams in 1973, among the 26 winners of the Third Down trophies announced today by Newspaper Enterprise Association (NEA).

The third down is the crucial play in football, the pivot on which games turn, and the quarterback's ability to execute in the clutch makes winners.

The nine winners at that position, the most valuable players in the balloting were Bob Lee, John Hadl, Fran Tarkenton, Ken Anderson, Jim Plunkett, Jim Hart, Roman Gabriel, Ken Stabler and Charley Johnson.

The only repeaters from 1972 in the team voting were a pair of superb runners, O. J. Simpson and Ron Johnson.

The 1973 Third Down Trophy winners:

Three Players On All-State

KINGSTON — Highland High School defensive lineman Len Centonze has been named to the New York State Sports Writers Association second team defense All-State small school football squad.

Centonze, the 5-10, 220 pound senior, is joined by Ellenville's Ray Younger, who was tabbed as a third team offensive end, and Highland's Mike Serini, who earned fourth team offensive tackle honors.

Each of the three were named to the Freeman's 1973 All-County team, with Younger getting the nod as Player-of-the-Year.

Centonze had 45 unassisted tackles and was in on 39 other takedowns, despite having been slowed down by a mid-season injury. The Highland co-captain recovered two fumbles and sacked opposition quarterbacks three times.

Younger, a 5-9, 140 pound senior, had 16 catches for 214 yards. The speedy Ellie receiver scored five touchdowns. Also a top-notch defensive back, he was in on 88 tackles.

Serini, a 6-2, 220 pound junior, was, according to Coach Lem Atkins, Highland's "best football player." He is the son of former Chicago Bear Wash Serini.

Six Section Nine players were accorded first team honors. They are: Ed Lake, Middletown, offensive end; Dan Gore, Port Jervis, offensive tackle; Brian Behnke, Goshen, center; Joe Klemm, Port Jervis, running back; Steve Turner, Port Jervis, middle guard; and Brian McNulty, Goshen, linebacker.

Yankees Add Mel Wright

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Yankees completed their coaching staff Wednesday when they signed Mel Wright to join Manager Bill Virdon's brain trust for 1974.

Wright, 45, a former Yankee hurler, was a pitching coach under Virdon with the Pittsburgh Pirates last season. He had signed for the '74 season with the Chicago Cubs, but the National League club made him available to the Yankees when New York requested his release.

Dick Howser and Elston Howard were retained as Yankee coaches when Ralph Houk resigned as manager. Former Yankee pitching ace Whitey Ford was added to the staff after last season.

Wright pitched four seasons in the majors, but only compiled a 2-4 record as a relief pitcher. He and Virdon were Yankee property when they were traded to the St. Louis Cardinals in 1954.

Braves Sign Jack Aker

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Atlanta Braves, trying to bolster their relief pitching for next season, today came to terms with free agent Jack Aker.

The 33-year-old righthander, 4-5 with 12 saves and a 4.08 ERA with the Cubs last season, agreed to join the Braves after getting his unconditional release from Chicago.

Aker is a 10-year major league veteran who spent four seasons with the Kansas City Athletics and four with the New York Yankees before his acquisition by the Cubs, in 1972.

His major league won-lost record is 45-43. His best season was 1966 with Kansas City when he was 8-4 with a 1.99 ERA.

Hall of Fame to Display Contemporary Baseball

COOPERSTOWN — The first room devoted entirely to contemporary baseball and its active stars has been opened in the Hall of Fame wing of the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum here.

A highlight of the room, put together by the Hall of Fame staff, is a series of glass-enclosed shadowboxes in which are displayed the color home uniforms of all 24 of the present Major League teams, plus team photos, individual stars and managers, club officials and home stadia.

Also included in each panel are yearbooks, press guides, team decals and pennants associated with each team. Present day umpires also have a spot in the Contemporary Baseball set-up.

A special display describing the histories of the Baseball Commissioner's office and the offices of the National and American Leagues occupy a prominent place in the section.

Occupying prominent spots at the outset are such luminaries of baseball as Hank Aaron, Dave McNally, Frank Robinson, Brooks Robinson, Vida Blue, Billy Williams, Nate Colbert and Willie Stargell.

Rookie Sidelined

NEW YORK (UPI) — Rookie defenseman Larry Sacharuk of the New York Rangers will be sidelined for two weeks with a badly lacerated hip.

Sacharuk required 10 stitches to close the wound Tuesday after he broke a shower stall door at his Long Beach, N.Y. home.

Prentice Retires

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Dean Prentice, left winger of the Minnesota North Stars and the National Hockey League's seventh leading alltime goal scorer with 391, has retired.

If you can save $50 a month,
Flex-IT
In a savings plan that is uniquely yours.
And immediately earn 6.75% guaranteed annual interest with a 7.08% effective annual yield.

Flex-IT stands for Flexible Installment Term, the Heritage plan that lets you earn the high yield of a term account without making a large lump-sum deposit.

And Flex-IT is so flexible, it is tailored to you alone. And available only at Heritage Savings Bank.

Here's how it works:

1. You decide how much you want to save regularly, as long as it averages at least $50 a month or $12.50 a week.

2. You set your own savings goal (minimum $1000) and decide how long it will take you to reach that goal.

3. In saving toward your goal, you may make larger deposits, make deposits more frequently, use a large deposit as a credit toward another payment, whatever—as long as, on the average, you follow your chosen deposit schedule.

4. When you reach your savings goal, your regular deposits stop and your money and its earned interest are converted to a permanent term account for a length of time that you choose.

And in the permanent term account, your money still earns a guaranteed 6.75% interest annually with a 7.08% effective annual yield.

5. The installment deposit period and the length of the permanent term account are up to you, as long as they do not exceed 7 years combined and as long as the permanent term account is for at least 2½ years.

For example: You can make installment deposits for 3½ years and have a permanent term account of 3½ years (Total: 7 years). Or, installment deposits for 1½ years and a 2½ year term account (Total: 4 years). Or, any other combination that suits you personally.

6. Flex-IT has many other options, too, which make this flexible, high-yield savings plan uniquely yours.

All the Flex-IT features are explained in an easy-to-read booklet. You can use the coupon or ask for it at any Heritage office.

Federal law permits premature withdrawal on term accounts provided rate of interest on amount withdrawn is reduced to the passbook rate (5%%) and 90 days' interest is forfeited.

Passengers Are Stricken With Food Poisoning

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — A chartered turbojet made a priority landing at Port Columbus International Airport Wednesday night after 30 passengers were afflicted with food poisoning.

The plane, returning here with 62 persons from a land-buying trip to Pueblo, Colo., was met at the runway gate by ambulances to take the ill to three area hospitals. All were expected to be released shortly.

Officials from American Airlines, who handled the flight, and McCulloch Development Co., could not be reached to explain why the plane did not land sooner during the four-hour trip since two of the ill were on oxygen.

"They (the passengers) did not eat on the plane," said a hospital spokesman. "They definitely were poisoned on the ground. They had a meal in Pueblo before they left."

Kohoutek Is Being Rated By Leading Comet Expert

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A leading comet expert says the comet Kohoutek still could be the "comet of the century" to scientists.

While early predictions of a spectacular sight on the horizon will not materialize, Dr. Brian Marsden of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory said Wednesday that Kohoutek's behavior is not any more unpredictable than other comets.

"Kohoutek is a better than average comet," Dr. Marsden said. "But there is just an awful lot we don't know about these things.

"We never had a case like this of a comet which came in so close to the sun being discovered so far out in space as this one, and this presented many interesting possibilities about what it could do," he said.

Comet Kohoutek was discovered March 7 of last year by Dr. Lubos Kohoutek, an astronomer in Hamburg, West Germany. Dr. Marsden said ordinarily the comet probably would not have been discovered until October, and it would not have attracted so much attention.

"But because it was discovered so early, scientists could prepare, and speaking as an astronomer, I'm delighted at the scientific observations made. No comet has been studied as extensively as this one and what is learned should be incredible," Dr. Marsden said.

As to Kohoutek's dimness, Dr. Marsden said comets are extremely unpredictable objects which can suddenly grow brighter or dimmer, burn out completely or even split into two or more other comets.

Recent studies of new comets show that they often appear brightly at a distance from the sun but when they loop around for a return orbit, they are dimmer.

"We feel that there may be a volatile substance on the outside of the comet head which is lost on the first pass, leaving just water, ice and other material which doesn't vaporize as easily," Dr. Marsden said. It is the vapor reflecting light that is seen in the sky, and Kohoutek could have lost its vaporizing substance passing the sun.

This kind of optical illusion could have made the comet seem bigger than it turned out to be. Combined with its early discovery, this led to some initial predictions which later had to be toned down, Dr. Marsden said.

Skylab Flight Director Gives Astros a Day Off

HOUSTON (UPI) — Flight director Philip Shaffer says the Skylab astronauts earned their day off today because of two straight days of almost unprecendented scientific research performed by the orbiting trio.

Gerald P. Carr, Edward G. Gibson and William R. Pogue averaged more than 30 hours of research work Tuesday and Wednesday. Shaffer said he was somewhat amazed at the work accomplished by the astronauts Tuesday and "They did it again today in spades."

As a result, this 56th day of their 84-day mission was designated as one of the most relaxed.

Usually, the pilots' days off are scheduled like any other day with times blocked out for showers, meals and other routines. But today's flight plan contained the word "open" everywhere except for four short science periods.

Shaffer called it the "do-it-yourself flight plan."

Gibson told flight controllers several days ago he and his colleagues usually had little time to rest on days off.

"Off duty activities?" Gibson said. "You've got to be kidding. There is no such thing up here. Our days off, the only thing that's different is we get to take a shower. I have not had time to do anything."

Gibson worked far ahead of his schedule Wednesday and asked for additional chores he could perform. He said he was going to try to talk Carr into swapping activities with him.

"Let me see if I've got enough butter cookies to go down and trade him," Gibson said.

Jean Adams' TEEN FORUM

TRIANGLE: (Q.) My best friend and I are very close and wouldn't do anything to hurt each other. But I have fallen in love with the guy she likes.

He has been trying to be with me but I haven't been with him.

I don't think he likes her, but it would hurt her so badly if I were with him and she found out. So tell me what I should do.—In Love in Alabama.

(A.) Some of your statements are not clear. I gather that your girl friend admires this boy, may even have a crush on him, but has never had a date or other more-than-just-friends relationship with him.

If that is the case, and if he asks you for a date and you want a date with him, then you are free to go ahead.

If, on the other hand, she is dating him on occasion or steadily, then you should be careful.

ONE TIMER: (Q.) I met Tim at a party and we had a lot of fun. He stayed with me the whole time and even kissed me good-bye. I haven't forgotten about him. But now every time I see him (which isn't very often), he barely seems to know I'm there. What can I do?—Puzzled in Pennsylvania.

(A.) Very little except to be friendly with him when you see him.

Some boys are not ready for regular friendships with girls but will be friendly when they are thrown together with a responsive girl. Some boys like girls in general but, either conciously or unconsciously, are hunting THE girl who is right. Some boys like to "play the field." Some boys prefer one girl but are friendly to others at times.

The boy you like probably fits into one of these categories.

Some negative-double devotees carry it forward to cover all overcalls. Others go through a fairly sensible two or three-spade limit.

Of course, those who say they double any bid negatively, point out that the higher the big the more likely that partner will leave it in. These high-level negative doubles certainly liven up the game, although it is doubtful which side benefits from them.

North and South were playing negative doubles through three spades so when West made his preemptive three spade overcall of South's opening club bid North stuck in a negative double.

Not that we should really blame negative doubles for his action. North had barely enough for a negative double at the one level. His three level double had to be close to suicidal.

On the other hand if he didn't have that toy to play with he would have passed. West would have played three spades and been down one after losing two clubs, two diamonds and a spade.

As it was, South bid four hearts in response to his partner's request. When it got around to East, he doubled. West opened the ace of spades and continued with the queen which East ruffed. After this start East still made two trump tricks and a club for a nice 500-point profit.

Two Steps by Nixon To Ease Energy Crisis

By United Press International

President Nixon has launched two initiatives aimed at easing the world's energy crisis, as new figures showed U.S. gasoline consumption is dropping rapidly.

U.S. consumption of gasoline dropped 18.6 per cent in the week ending Dec. 29 from the previous week, energy officials in Washington said. They said the decline a week earlier was 7.7 per cent.

Deputy energy chief John Sawhill said U.S. consumption of crude oil is also down and that a decision whether to ration gasoline may be postponed beyond March 1, the date officials had set for a standby rationing system to be in readiness.

From San Clemente, Calif., President Nixon Wednesday invited six European countries, Canada and Japan to send their foreign ministers to a Feb. 11 conference in Washington to work out solutions to oil supply and price problems.

Nixon also invited 13 oil-producing nations in the Middle East, Africa, Latin America and Asia to join the discussions at a later date.

Two of the oil-consuming nations Nixon invited meanwhile were making their own arrangements with Arab producers.

The French government Wednesday confirmed it had signed a three-year contract with Saudi Arabia for delivery of 27 million tons of crude oil but did not say what Paris gave in return. It has been widely reported that France will exchange arms for the oil.

A British official started a two-week tour of Middle East shiekdoms to discuss bartering industrial equipment for oil.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and energy chief William E. Simon were expected to hold a joint news conference on the subject later today.

Invited to the Feb. 11 Washington conference were Britain, France, West Germany, Italy, Holland, Norway, Canada and Japan. The other invitations went to Abu Dhabi, Algeria, Ecuador, Gabon, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Libya, Nigeria, Quatar, Saudi Arabia and Venezuela.

Twelve of those countries represented in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) Wednesday announced in Geneva a three-month freeze on any further price increases.

"There will be no increase or decrease in the price of crude oil until April 1," Iranian Finance Minister Jamshid Amouzegar said of the OPEC members who produce 85 per cent of world oil imports.

'Oil Majors' Face Tough Time

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There is a rising belief on Capitol Hill that the oil shortage is primarily the work of U.S. petroleum companies rather than the Arab embargo.

As a result, Congress is likely to be in what one source describes as a "punitive mood" when it returns from recess in a week and a half, and the oil industry could be in for a very tough time in the months ahead.

Several new laws that would deal major regulatory blows to the industry are under active consideration. Already in preparation are measures to force oil companies to disclose actual supply data they now consider top secret, impose excess profit taxes, and even put an absolute limit on profits.

One proposal would go so far as to change the industry's entire status to that of a public utility like a railroad or a telephone company.

Hostility toward the so-called "oil majors" stems from at least three factors, congressional sources say:

—Evidence that the Arab embargo is as leaky as a spaghetti strainer and that plenty of fuel is getting through to the United States.

—Indications that current retail shortages of gasoline and heating fuel stem from oil companies withholding their products rather than any actual decline in supplies.

—New "historical" evidence on the oil companies' role not only in the Arab embargo, but in moving a substantial share of the U.S. oil industry itself overseas during the past decade.

Much of the fresh material on oil company operations has been developed by staff members of the Senate Interior and Foreign Relations committees, working for Sens. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., and Frank Church, D-Idaho, respectively.

Jackson has scheduled hearings in early February on the supply disclosure legislation, and Church's Multinational Corporations subcommittee will hold sessions on the oil companies' influence on U.S. and foreign governments, perhaps as early as the end of January.

Some sources say the Church hearings are likely to produce "spectacular revelations" of behind-the-scenes finagling by the major oil companies both in the current crisis that began with the October war, and in the recent past.

The feeling is growing on Capitol Hill, as one staffer puts it, that "there is a serious question whether the United States is really facing a shortage of crude.

"Where the pinch comes is in the ability to fulfill the normal increases in demand for refined products. Last year demand was up 10 per cent because of bigger cars and the economic boom.

"This year it was supposed to go up 8 per cent before restrictions were imposed. But demand is off now from what it was expected to be, and that is what we are looking into—why there are still such serious shortages that people have to wait in line and pay exorbitant prices."

Actually overall gasoline demand is off almost two per cent from a year ago—despite the fact there are more cars on the road—and demand for heating oil and jet fuel are off by 12 per cent, according to the latest API figures.

Indeed, refineries in the United States now are running at only 91.6 per cent of capacity according to Interior Department estimates.

With demand down and refineries running at less than emergency rates it is difficult, congressional sources say, to understand why shortages should be so intense.

They suggest the reason lies in the oil companies' desire for the kind of profits that can be produced by an artificial shortage.

It is the U.S. oil interests' concentration abroad that will form the main subject for the Church hearing in late Jan.

Kissinger Leaves Tonight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger takes off late tonight on his third trip since the October Arab-Israeli war seeking peace "all over God's green acre throughout the Middle East."

The latest jaunt will take him to Aswan, for consultations with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, to Jerusalem for talks with Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir, back to Aswan and then back home, perhaps by Monday.

Kissinger met last weekend with Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan in Washington to discuss possible disengagement of Israeli and Egyptian troops along the Suez canal. Egyptian sources said Wednesday the secretary will relay to Sadat Israeli proposals for troop pullbacks.

The formal peace talks in Geneva recessed Wednesday for six days.

State Department spokesman George Vest explained the need for Kissinger's trip:

"We have felt a sense of urgency in terms of trying to get a separation of forces because, with the forces intermingled as they are, right up and down the Suez area, the sense of an outbreak is so great that we have felt this is a first and urgent matter."

Vest stressed that the trip was not due to any deadlock.

"Most conferences take place in an atmosphere where certain work is done at the table and certain work is done in the corridors," Vest said.

"In this particular case, the corridors seem to be spread all over God's green acre throughout the Middle East, so the corridor work is being done out there. Thus this is a perfectly natural way in which to prepare for the more precise, final arrangements which we hope will come out at the table."

Home Bread Making May Be on Way Out

By United Press International

Faced with a gradual climb in the supermarket cost of bread and industry predictions of more possible increases, some homemakers are rediscovering an almost forgotten art—baking bread at home.

But due to the growing cost of flour, even that alternative is rapidly becoming uneconomical.

Barbara Williams, a Falls Church, Va., housewife, said that since the end of 1972 the price per pound of flour has jumped from 12 cents to 32 or 34 cents.

"Making bread at home will soon be a luxury no one can afford," Mrs. Williams said. "I think we housewives deserve a better deal than the Russians got." U.S. wheat reserves were depleted 18 months ago when the Soviet Union purchased huge supplies of American wheat to supplement its meager crop.

Bill O. Mead, chairman of the American Bakers Association, is another critic of the Russian wheat deal.

He told a news conference in Washington Wednesday that because of large U.S. wheat exports, the nation's reserves are dangerously low.

Mead predicted that a 24-ounce loaf of bread on the shelves of grocery stores may cost $1 by late spring unless the administration moves to place temporary curbs on wheat exports.

In the absence of such restrictions, Mead said, "a bread shortage seems likely" and costs will skyrocket.

Later, Carroll G. Brunthaver, assistant agriculture secretary, rebutted Mead's charges, saying: "I don't think the price of wheat will increase substantially (from current record levels) and the price of bread should not increase substantially this spring."
